About

Rodney's passion for design began at the age of 13 designing and making clothes for local rock bands in Durban, South Africa. After high school Rodney moved to New York City and graduated from Parson School of Design. Shortly after, Rodney launched his own clothing line, selling to Bergdorf Goodman, Saks 5th Avenue, Barney's, Henri Bendel, Neiman Marcus and specialty boutiques in the U.S., Japan and England. Rodney also consulted at Tahari, Iisli, and Casper. Upon closing his own business, Rodney was hired to help launch the Marc by Marc Jacobs line. He also worked for Theory, Ellen Tracy, Karl Lagerfeld and Banana Republic, before moving to Maui to join Karin Frost and her family at Ergobaby. Ergobaby was sold to Compass Holdings in 2010. Rodney remains on as VP of Design and Product Development, designing and developing innovative, patented, award winning baby products.
Rodney's technical expertise comes from a passion for tailoring and high-end apparel. His talent lies in designing, engineering and building soft goods, with extensive experience in apparel and baby products.
