ABSTRACT

A method for providing content via a communications network on a user's computer, obtained from a plurality of resources in an organized arrangement is provided. The method includes creating a show structure of nodes, each node identifying a resource from a plurality of accessible resources, at least some of which are network accessible resources. Without requiring user input, a plurality of the network accessible resources, identified by a corresponding node, are automatically accessed. Content corresponding to each of the accessed resources is automatically presented through the user's computer in accordance with the show structure. Advertisement content is presented to the user in connection with the automatic presentation of the content through the user's computer.

Field Of The Invention

This Invention relates generally to computer networks, and specifically to a method of sequencing and scheduling web pages, via a suite of software applications.

Background Of The Invention

The worldwide network of computers commonly known as the "Internet" has grown tremendously since the creation of a subset known as the "World Wide Web" (WWW or Web), popularized in 1993. The emergence of the Web, and its accompanying standards enabled users to move beyond traditional on-line data exposure, which required knowledge of protocols and other low-level computer constructs, to a much more filtered and full-featured interface in the form of a "Web Browser." The Web Browser filters out the computer constructs, displaying only pertinent content, such as text, images, animations and sounds, while hiding from the user the computer codes that are used to negotiate access, generate and display this content. Some of the standards popularized by the web are Hypertext Transfer Protocol (HTTP), Hypertext Markup Language (HTML) and the Uniform Resource Locator (URL). HTTP allows HTML documents, which carry many forms of information, from text and images, to audio and video, to be easily found via a URL from a collection of networks known as the Internet. These networks have public and private files which are accessed via routing tables. The routing tables reside on Domain Name Servers (DNS) and are regularly updated.

Two innovations provided by the Browser environment, HTTP and the Internet are: specialized display of data (certain text and graphics) and "Hyperlinks" which appear as "clickable-buttons" or "links" made of text or graphics in the Graphical User Interface (GUI) presented by the Browser. These links contain an address for another location on the Internet. Instead of seeing computer language full of telecommunications protocols and an occasional listing of a graphic file's name, the user sees only human pertinent text and an automatically displayed image within this text. The user is shown graphical or textual links to facilitate navigation instead of having to properly enter complex path names.

This combination of features, coupled with the ease of use that HTML provides as a page publishing format, have proved to be very popular, leading to a mass adoption of this new medium by many constituencies. These include education, most areas of business (publishing, finance, commerce, entertainment, etc.) and government. Given the increasing adoption of the Web, many non-technically oriented users use this new medium to go from page to page, shifting from one computer network to the next simply by making decisions on which links to click. Search engines which index the Web allow these users to quickly locate URLs and their associated links. In addition, content aggregators collect and publish collections of Web pages. In just a few years, the Web has evolved from static pages to pages containing animation, personalized data, commerce-level security and streaming audio and video. A more recent innovation is the "Push Technology" model which is found in the more recently released browsers.

Push technology, pioneered by Pointcast™, has been adopted by Netscape™ and

Google/YouTube Exhibit 1025/1125

Microsoft™, the two browser giants, as the next way to connect viewers with content. As implemented by Pointcast, push technology began in 1996 as a personalized data gathering service. Users select content sources from a list and the Pointcast service automatically provides updated information which is displayed by the user's screen saver in a uniform format. Information providers who send information to users using the Pointcast system must first format their information according to requirements set by Pointcast. Thus, the "pages" of information displayed by the Pointcast screen saver are specially prepared screens. A user of the Pointcast system can access information only from those sources which have prepared information in the Pointcast format.

By collecting user interest profiles, the current "4.x" level browsers can constantly update a specific set of topics, from news, sports and weather, to financial and entertainment content. Thus, push technology enables information to come to the user instead of requiring the user to seek out the information. This not only facilitates a new distribution method for publishers and advertisers, but it also fosters new community models and demographics to go with them. As web browsing has evolved it has changed from a mere novelty, to a relied upon conduit of information flow.

Recently, problems with access to a major on-line service provider produced lawsuits stemming from lack of access to mission-critical information, in both receipt and transmission. As this technology has moved from budding curiosity browsing to true reliance, the blossoming of the technology has yet to show what mature fruit it will provide. Commerce is a large part of the development of the medium as companies like Cisco and Boeing conduct exclusive web-based sales in excess of one billion dollars. In addition, consumer and small business oriented vendors such as Dell have sales in excess of $1 million per day via their website. But what other services, beyond a catalog of information and products, will the Internet and its Web offer? The subject invention proposes a next-level of functionality that may provide an insight.

Summary of the Invention

In accordance with one embodiment of the invention, a presentation software is employed in a web browser software. A triggering event, such as a mouse click on a single "link" commences the presentation of a series of resources instead of one resource at a time. This arrangement of resources, is defined as a "show structure" or "structure," which contains a set of nodes. Each node represents a resource such as a web page, an executable file, or a data file stored at a predetermined location and accessed via its corresponding address. This structure allows access to one or several topics of information from several sources in a continuous arrangement. The topics of information include multimedia data such as audio, video, graphics and text that together define a presentation show to a user.

It is noted that in accordance with one embodiment of the invention the nodes that define a show structure or a structure may be arranged as a multidimensional sequence. An array of nodes may be available for a multimedia presentation or show. Each node in the array is accessible from the other nodes in the array. These nodes or a portion of these nodes are selected for presentation. A show structure is defined by one or more paths that are spanned through these nodes.

The information conveyed by displaying the resources arranged may be interspersed with advertising and public service announcements (PSAs). The presentation of all resources may be adjusted for different pacing attributes of individual users. While the invention may automate a number of the decisions that a user makes in viewing a plurality of resources, it in no way inhibits the interactivity currently present on the Web. The decision-making process is not inhibited: it is optional, allowing for preprogramming and navigating the arrangement of resources on-the-fly or simply watching a series of pre-edited resources. The present invention serves as an enhancement which refocuses the state of content delivery to a user via a communication medium, such as the Internet, TV/PC hardware and software offerings.

In accordance with another embodiment of the present invention a method of presenting information content is provided, which includes the steps of accessing and providing the information from an arrangement of content sources, or a show structure of nodes. Each node in the structure includes both an address from which the information may be accessed and an indication of the duration for which the content will be presented. For each node, the method locates the content source, accesses the content and presents it for the indicated duration.

According to another aspect of the invention, while the requested information is being presented, the method queues and caches the next resource, then loads the next resource for viewing.

According to yet another aspect of the invention, a method is provided by which structures of content sources may be generated. A user may select and organize content from a variety of sources by several methods including a bookmark list, a list of search results and through the creation of a structure of nodes by a "drag-and-drop" technique.

According to yet another aspect of the invention, a method is provided for generating and publishing these structures. When a plurality of nodes are available for presentation, the system determines the order of such presentation based on predetermined set of criteria. Furthermore, a user may specify additional criteria for arranging the order of nodes in order to create a show structure. The method further includes provisions for a filter which customizes a preexisting structure by automatically conforming variable items in the structure to a predefined user profile.

In accordance with another embodiment of the invention, the presentation system and method of displaying resources includes a system for presentation of a user's local computer resources. Therefore, the arrangement of resources may include a show structure wherein each node in the structure represents a resource that exists locally within the user's computer. These resources may be scheduled in accordance with a specifiable arrangement and executed in accordance with the schedule.

In accordance with another embodiment of the invention, the method for creating a show structure may be employed by a variety of user terminals, such as computer PCS, dumb terminals, TV sets and other terminals that are capable of displaying information. Furthermore, for certain applications, the method for creating and displaying content from various resources, in accordance with one embodiment of the invention, may function as an operating system for managing resources for display on the user's terminal.

Detailed Description

connectivity of users and content providers on the Internet. Briefly, the Internet includes a large collection of content providers 10 which may be accessed by the users 12. Typically, a user accesses content on a "server" by establishing a data communications connection to the server through the network of computers 14, 16 defined by the Internet. Each server 10 operates a "web site" which includes data files that contain text, images, audio or video content. The web site typically includes a group of linked HTML documents or pages that contain links to the data files. A user 12 may access the content in a file by simply selecting one of these links. The file may be transferred to a cache in the user's computer and presented using the browser or the content may be provided directly by the server 10 to the user 12 as an encoded data stream (e.g. an audio program) which is decoded and played out by the user's computer 12.

Content accessed by the browser may not be in a file on a remote computer but may be generated by the remote computer and transmitted to the user directly. Much of the data that may be accessed by a browser on a remote computer is classified by Multipurpose Internet Mail Extension (MIME) type. One MIME type is an HTML file, another is a JPEG file, a still picture that is encoded according to the standard developed by the Joint Picture Experts Group. Mime types can also be proprietary data. In this instance, the browser may need to be configured with a "plug-in" program in order to decode and present the proprietary data. An example of such a plug-in is the Macromedia™ flash technology which allows streaming animation to be displayed with accompanying audio. For more information on MIME types, see Netscape's User Handbook at http://home.netscape.com/eng/mozilla/1.1/handbook/docs/answers.html, HTTP (HyperText Transfer Protocol) servers use HTML formatting. Netscape software has the built-in capability to read HTML-formatted pages (as well as the GIF, JPEG, and XBM graphic file formats). Netscape can interpret many other file formats with the help of external helper applications. To accommodate the file formats requiring helper applications, Netscape keeps a mapping of file formats to helper applications. MIME (Multipurpose Internet Mail Extensions) is a standardized method for organizing divergent file formats. The method organizes file formats according to the file's MIME type. When Netscape software retrieves a file from a server, the server provides the MIME type of the file. Netscape uses the MIME type to establish whether the file format can be read by the software's built-in capabilities or, if not, whether a suitable helper application is available to read the file.

For servers that do not provide a MIME type with a file, Netscape interprets the file's extension (a suffix appended to a file name). For example, the .HTML extension in the file name index.html suggests a file in the HTML format. Likewise, a .zip extension suggests a compressed file, an .rtf extension suggests a file in the Rich Text Format, and so on.

The Internet content relating to a show structure, in accordance with one embodiment of the invention, may be implemented as a new MIME type. Thus a show structure may be created by a show originator who intends to present a corresponding arrangement of resources to a user at a specifiable rate. The show structure may be transmitted to a plurality of users via the Internet. Thus, in order to ensure the integrity of a show structure a security arrangement in accordance with one embodiment of the invention is provided as described hereinafter.

Thus, the software that creates the show structure allows the show originator, to encode the identity of its creator. Furthermore, a mechanism is employed to automatically verify that the show structure comprising the show has not been tampered with. In one exemplary implementation, this is accomplished by using cryptographic techniques; for example the Digital Signature Initiative (c.f. http://w3c.org/Dsig/Overview.html). The identity of the show originator is thus represented by a digital signature. The security status of the currently selected show structure is then visible at all times to the user. If a user chooses to edit a sequence of a show, the previously attached signature will be discarded and the user will be made aware of it's new unsigned status.

Today it is taken for granted that, to access services, information and entertainment on the Web, a user must make certain choices, position the mouse pointer and click the mouse buttons appropriately to indicate the decisions. For example, in a typical Web access, these selections are made at a rate of approximately once per minute. The result of each mouse click is another page and another set of decisions. Typically, a user is expected to click one of the several dozen links provided on any given page, (see, for example, cnn.com).. Alternatively, a user may type in a URL or access a bookmark to visit a favorite search engine. In addition, a user may access a collection of "channels" of "push content" via Netscape Communicator's Netcaster or Microsoft Internet Explorer's Active Desktop and sit back for a few seconds to view an animated presentation of a specific publisher's offerings. The user may even choose a headline of a story presented in Pointcast's screen saver to receive more information about that topic grouping within the application, or to transfer to a relevant website. All of these methods typically require a significant amount of user effort and decision-making to drive the web surfing experience.

Although the users and servers are shown as separate machines in Figure 1, it is well known that a computer being used as a server may host users and may also serve as a conduit for connecting a user to a remote server.

Figure 2 is a block diagram which illustrates the basic layout of a typical user's computer, be it a personal computer (PC) or a network computer (NC), as typified by webtv™ or a Java Station™. The computer may also be a dedicated workstation coupled to a local area network or a terminal connected to a mainframe computer which is, in turn, coupled to the Internet or other communication networks. The user requires no special hardware to use this invention. No additional cards with TV tuners are required, but they can be used as an enhancement. This diagram illustrates one possible environment for the invention and should not be interpreted as limiting the invention. It is contemplated that the invention may employ user terminals which may have radically different hardware, including but not limited to hand held devices, public kiosks, dumb terminals, set-top boxes, TV sets, and even "credit card-sized" configurations.

The exemplary system includes a microprocessor 32 a random access memory (RAM) 34, a memory management circuit, a disk drive 36, a floppy disk drive 37, a read only memory (ROM) 33 which includes the basic I/O system (BIOS) for the computer system, a CD ROM drive 42, a modem 50, a digital signal processor 43, a keyboard controller 38, a mouse controller 39, a video controller 40, and an audio controller 41 which are all connected by a system bus 31. A keyboard 22, a mouse 23 and a graphic display monitor 24 are connected to the keyboard controller 38, mouse controller 39, and video controller 40. Stereo speakers 25A and 25B are connected to the audio controller 41. In the exemplary system, the connection to the on-line-service provider 16 (shown in Figure 1) is made through the modem 50 via a telephone line 56.

As shown in Figure 2, the memory 34 includes an operating system 60, for example, Windows 95™; a browser 62 for example, Netscape Navigator™ 4.0; and a cache memory 63. The hard disk 36 is the main data storage device for the system shown in Figure 1. It includes the software needed to run the browser and libraries of software used by the operating system to control the operation of all of the components that are connected to the system bus 31. The hard disk 36 also includes a disk cache (not shown) for the browser. When data on a remote computer is accessed by the browser, it may be transferred by Hypertext Transfer Protocol (HTTP) or File Transfer Protocol (FTP) and stored in this disk cache temporarily.

The component of the invention which is used on the user computer 12 may be, for example, a browser plug in. While, in this example, the user component is a browser plug-in, it is contemplated that it may be an Applet which runs on a virtual computer defined by the browser, it may also be a stand-alone program, which includes the functionality that is typically provided by a browser, or it may be a distributed application. The user component is described below with reference to Figure 4 and is referred to as the program RoboSurf™. The RoboSurf program allows a user to view a show having content that corresponds to a show structure as will be explained in more detail later.

It is noted that in accordance with one embodiment of the invention the nodes that define a show structure or a structure may be arranged as a multidimensional sequence. Fig. 2b illustrates an array 300 of nodes that may be available for a multimedia presentation or show. Each node identifies an available resource and the time the resource may be presented to the user. As illustrated in Fig. 2B nodes 302, 304, 306, 308, 310 and 312 are available for presentation in accordance with an exemplary arrangement. Each node in the array is accessible from the other nodes in the array. For a typical show or presentations, an arrangement of these nodes or a portion of these nodes is selected for presentation as described in reference with Figs. 2c through 2f. Thus, a show structure is defined by one or more paths that are spanned through these nodes.

Fig. 2c illustrates a show structure that simultaneously spans multiple paths from the same starting node such as node 310 to each one of the remaining nodes 312, 302, 304, 306 and 308. Thus, a show in accordance with the structure presented in Fig. 2c simultaneously presents the contents identified by nodes 312, 302, 304, 306 and 308, after the content identified by node 310 is presented.

Alternatively, as illustrated in Fig. 2d-1 a show structure can span a path with a length of four beginning at node 308 and traversing to nodes 312, 302 and 306. The state map of this path is illustrated in Fig. 2d-2. Thus, a show in accordance with the structure presented in Fig. 2d-1 first presents the contents identified by node 308, followed by contents identified by nodes 312, 302 and 306.

In a still alternative arrangement, a show structure can be created that also spans multiple paths concurrently, as illustrated in Fig. 2e. For example a first path spans nodes 308, 302, 306 and 310. The second path spans nodes 312, 306, 304 and 310. As illustrated nodes 302, 306 and 310 are spanned simultaneously with nodes 306, 304 and 310. Thus a show in accordance with the structure presented in Fig. 2e first presents the contents identified by node 310, followed by the contents identified by node 312. Thereafter, the show structure presents contents identified in nodes 302, and 306 at the same time that is presents the contents identified in nodes 306 and 304. Finally, the structure presents contents identified in node 310.

Thus, a show structure may include one or more paths that can be presented sequentially and/or concurrently. It is noted that a path may include portions that is presented sequentially and other portions that are presented concurrently. Furthermore, one node to many nodes paths and many nodes to one node paths can also define a show structure. Every time that a node is detected the corresponding content of that node is presented to the user's terminal regardless of whether a plurality of nodes have been detected at the same time or separately.

It is noted that the process that creates and/or organizes and manages the arrangement of these nodes and ultimately the corresponding resources, may be implemented as a user specific operating system in accordance with one embodiment of the invention. The operating system then allows the paths to be selected and arranged in accordance with interactive user specifications or in accordance with predefined criteria. Thus, the operating system, among other things, organizes and arranges the available resources as identified by available nodes; allows end users to select and interact with files and applications; and make certain files and or resources available to be shared by all the other resources. For example, during a presentation of a show, certain sound effects and visual effects may be shared by all resources that may have use for such effects. Such an operating system can be employed for many applications described herein in accordance with various embodiments of the invention.

A show structure may be presented on a server that can be accessed by a user who visits a corresponding site on the server. This component on the server is described below with reference to Figure 3, and is referred to as the program Robosites™. Robosites may perform the actual transfer operations to obtain the pages from other web sites.

In addition to RoboSurf and Robosites, the exemplary system includes RoboGuide™, described below with reference to Figure 5, a program that allows several users to access a prepared show structure of nodes or links and have it customized to their respective preferences. The system also includes a program referred to as RoboPublisher™, described below with reference to Figure 6, which functions as a publishing software so as to help a publisher to prepare show structures. The entire suite of programs is referred to below as RoboCast.

Referring again to Figure 3 a flow-chart diagram which illustrates the operation of the server-side application, Robosites is explained in more detail. The first two steps in Figure 3 represent activities occurring at a user's computer 12. At step 70, the user starts to access the Internet or other network via a Personal Computer (PC) a Network Computer (NC), Web-Enabled TV Set, or other similar device. At step 72, the user encounters and selects a URL, for example, within a screen saver, an e-mail message, or a website, which is designated as an entry node in a show structure of resources. The URL may be so designated by its association within a list generated by a publisher, by results that are automatically generated by a search engine or because it is the first URL in a show structure of URL's that was manually collected by the user. The server stores a plurality of show structures each structure including nodes that represent a resource on the Internet. Thus, each structure represents a show that is available for the user's preview.

Accessing the resources referred to by the URL initiates a structure of events in the application Robosites which is running on server 10, shown in Figure 1. At step 74, the server parses the request into task sets, initiating the look-up of the resources indicated by the URL. This step gathers the relevant data and custom packages it for the browser 62, shown in Figure 2. As part of its custom packaging application Robosites provides a set of contents that can be displayed on the user's display terminal in the form of a persistent content window. Therefore, a small window on the user's screen begins to display contents that is provided by the server, such as advertising or user specific messages. Furthermore, as part of its custom packaging application, Robosites may arrange the location on the screen where the user can view a selected show, and also updates show structures that had been previously used by a user and had been cached in the user's computer.

At step 76, Robosites checks whether the user is intended to receive information in a dynamic arrangement referred to as value added dynamic content. As will be explained in more detail below such value added dynamic content may include additional URL locations or files that are deemed by Robosite system to be of interest to the user, such as advertising material. Such dynamic content is usually based on, among other things, the user's profile. For example, some of the factors relating to a user profile, which are considered include a particular sports team preference; a demographic; or a pre-set profile as specified in the software. This information is used as selection criteria which is sent to a database and, at step 78, a page, conforming to the user's preferences, is retrieved by the server, either locally or from a remotely located database. Thus, this dynamic content may be presented in the persistent content window of the user's display screen or as information and messaging contents selectively interspersed between a show structure.

At step 80, if the resource addressed by the URL does not include dynamic content or if the user is unable to receive dynamic content, a resource having pre-defined content is retrieved, either directly from a Robocast-operated resource, or from a third party with prior authorization to handle such content requests. For example, a resource having a default set of advertising content may be presented to the user.

At step 82, either the dynamic or pre-defined URL is accessed and the content associated with the URL is retrieved, encoded and delivered to the browser at step 84. The content provided from the location addressed by the URL may be among other formats, include HTML, DHTML or XML documents. The delivered information may contain references for many other data types, including animation, streaming and non-streaming audio and video, Virtual Reality Modeling Language (VRML) Quicktime VR, and front-ends for several flavors of database applications, to name a few.

At step 84 the content retrieved by RoboSites is delivered ty the user's browser for a show presentation. This step is inherent in the operation of browser 62 (shown in Figure 2), accordingly, it is not described in detail. At step 86, a timer is started in response to a message produced by the browser 62 indicating that the retrieved content has been delivered and is ready to be presented. This timer is set from a value provided in the corresponding node in a show structure which indicates an amount of time that the content accessed from the associated URL is to be displayed. It is noted that RoboSites provides an additional code to the content corresponding to the amount of time the content is displayed. For example, for an HTML file, Robosites includes additional tags corresponding to the duration that the HTML document will be displayed by the user's browser.

At step 88, Robosites determines if the user has selected another URL before the timer expires. It is noted that the user may select another URL either manually or via a RoboSurf program that resides on the user's computer. In that event the newly selected URL is based on a node within a show structure that is being executed by the user's RoboSurf program. If another URL has been selected, the program will do one of two things: 1) forward that user away from the predetermined course of the show structure that was entered at the beginning of this process and take the user on another course, based on the other URL selected; or 2) skip them forward on the predetermined course that is being played for the user in accordance with the selected structure . This latter scenario is advantageous for a quick reader, or someone who has seen the presented content before, or in the case of content that the viewer chooses to skip (even an advertisement or PSA).

If the user has selected a new URL during the display time allowed by the timer, then, at step 90 Robosites determines whether the next URL relates to a show structure or not. This may be determined simply by the lack of new URL requests. It may also be determined by checking the header information of the new URL, as described below with reference to Table I. As shown in step 93, the user's decisions are recorded to a database at this point, providing a list of feedback for advertisers and content providers in some cases. If, for example, an advertisement for cat food is displayed, a user may skip over the advertisement or otherwise indicate that cat food advertisements are not interesting. This information is recorded at step 93 and used to direct only advertisements that are of interest to the user.

At step 94 the system requests the next resource in the show structure and returns to step 74 described above. It is noted that in accordance with another embodiment of the invention, it is possible to change the course of events to be displayed to the viewer by substituting next resource request at step 94 with a previous resource request. For example, if the forward going display provides a first URL content relating to weather forecast to a second URL content relating to sports news , the reverse going display provides the sports news before the weather forecast.

It is also noted that a user may switch to another set of show structure at any time by selecting a desired structure, for example by a Robosurf program employed by the user's computer. The instructions relating to the newly selected path in a structure may be provided via point A as illustrated in Fig. 3. Furthermore, a newly selected path in a structure may also be diverted back to the prior show structure by using the application's "surf" feature (described below with reference to Figure 7). The user's selections are tracked by the user's Robosurf program. Thus, for example when a URL relating to a second sbow structure is selected, by being clicked for the first time, the system remembers where the user left the initial structure and returns the user to that point in the structure upon the second click of that surf button. Alternatively, the history feature, inherent in most browsers, may be used to return the user to pages that were presented moments before or days before.

If, at step 88, the user does not interact with the system within the allotted time (which is set by the user or publisher), the timer expires at step 92 and that signals the request for another resource, thus enabling the play sequence for automatic surfing.

At step 96, the program requests the next node in the currently playing show structure. While this sequence has been described as a simple display of preprogrammed URLs, it is contemplated that, in more complex forms, this process may stream URLs to the viewer, while monitoring the user's habits (e.g. which sites are skipped and which sites the user views for the full display time) and injecting targeted content, including news, advertising and PSAs into the data stream.

If the URL selected at step 88, before the time-out, is not another show structure, the Robosites process displays the selected content and resets the timer. If no additional content is available, a user-specified show structure will be optionally displayed.

Figure 4 is a flow-chart diagram which illustrates the operation of the exemplary user component of the system, referred to as the RoboSurf program, in accordance with one embodiment of the invention. Briefly, this program allows a user to schedule, personalize and play content obtained from Web addresses. Using RoboSurf, a user may access almost any accessible website as a node in a structure. It is noted that while RoboSurf is described as a browser plug-in, it may be an Applet, stand-alone program or distributed application.

The RoboSurf process illustrated by Figure 4 begins at step 110 to access a default list of URLs that may be generated by, for example, one of several sources, such as : 1) RoboCast's web server network that will supply a general listing of available show structures; 2) a pre-selected list generated by the server in response to information obtained about the user from a Profiler program (e.g. structures defined for an Intranet described below with reference to Figure 6); 3) the results of a Search initiated through the RoboCast system or through a non-affiliated search engine; 4) an e-mail message, 5) the contents of a screen saver's play queue; or 6) other delivery methods.

At step 112 the URL is delivered to the browser 62 by one of these methods in a traditional manner. This corresponds to step 84 of Figure 3, described above. Also at step 112, the content is received and/or activated either automatically or programmatically for presentation to the user. Once RoboSurf begins to display the content, it starts a timer, at step 114. This timer has a duration that is determined from the information contained in each node of the current show structure that corresponds to this URL.

At step 116, while the timer is running, RoboSurf monitors the user's actions to determine if the user wants to manually override the play sequence by clicking a URL before the time-out. The user may act in several ways to override the play sequence. First, the user may select a node or a link on the displayed resource at step 122. In this instance, if the selected link is itself part of a show structure, the program goes to step 124, and the newly selected show structure replaces the current structure. If the selected link is not part of a show structure, the program goes to step 120 to get the next resource of the initial structure and the timer is reset and play continues at step 112.

Second, the user may click on the Surf button, in the control buttons 7, shown in Figure 7, and then select a link on the displayed resource. By pressing the Surf button, the user temporarily suspends the display of the original show structure, to review contents of pages accessible by hyperlinks presented on a displayed page. When this review is complete, the show structure may be restarted at the point of departure by simply clicking on the Surf button a second time.

At step 118 if the user has not selected any URLs, the time-out occurs and the play sequence resumes at step 120. In the exemplary embodiment of the invention, this step highlights the next item in the schedule window 2 (shown in Figure 7), selects the corresponding URL and branches back to step 112, causing Robosites to deliver the content at the requested URL to the browser 62. It is noted that in accordance with one embodiment of the invention, either RoboSurf or Robosites programs may operate independently without interaction with the other.

Figure 5 is a flow-chart diagram which illustrates the operation of the RoboGuide component of the RoboCast program suite. RoboGuide is a helper application that provides a viewing guide which offers a personalized look at various show structures of content that have been cached at the server. RoboGuide interacts with information produced by a Profiler program to modify the cached show structures to eliminate content or add alternate content according to a user's preferences.

RoboGuide program starts at step 150 where the user starts access to the Internet or other network via a Personal Computer (PC) a Network Computer (NC), Web-Enabled TV Set, or other similar device. The user encounters and selects a URL which has been designated as the entry node in a show structure of resources by a publisher. This URL may be encountered, for example, within a screen saver, an e-mail message, or a website.

In accordance with one embodiment of the invention, the server terminal that employs the RoboGuide program stores a plurality of various show structures that may be of interest to the users. These show structures may relate to different topics or subjects that visitors may have access via the server. An example of such a server may be a search engine such as those available by YAHOO ® or EXCITE ® . In accordance with one embodiment of the invention, the RoboGuide program may prepare various show structures based on a user's search specifications. The results of a search may include a plurality of URL locations that contain pertinent information relating to the search topic. In response, the RoboGuide program creates a show structure that includes all or portion of the uncovered URL locations as the result of the search.

At step 152 the RoboGuide program receives a request from a user for a URL location that is provided by the server. At step 154, the program retrieves from its database a show structure corresponding to the user's request. For example, the server may present a show on travel defined by a show structure prepared by the RoboGuide program.

It is noted that in accordance with one embodiment of the invention, the RoboGuide program may create a customized show structure based on the user's preferences that can be obtained in accordance with various filtering techniques commercially available. The server may already have information on the user, for example, via a profiler program that the user had previously updated via a RoboSites program as described above in reference with Fig. 3. Thus, based on such adaptive filtering technique the RoboGuide program creates a personalized content that can be delivered for each user or groups of users.

At step 155 the program employs a filtering technique to create the customized show structure. An exemplary filtering process may be that which is available from Firefly.net, described below. This filtering is based on rating the resources (e.g. rating a cat food advertisement as inappropriate if the user profile does not indicate that the user has a cat or if the user indicates disinterest in cat food advertisements either explicitly by clicking on an on-screen "button" (not shown) indicating disinterest or implicitly as may be inferred from a pattern of skipping over cat food advertisements when they are presented). The information generated by the Profiler program is fed to the server based on "cookie technology," a common method of maintaining information about a client on the web. The server reads the cookie for preferences and date information then feeds a personalized request to the database which sends a dynamically generated list of URLs to the user.

At step 158, in response to the received show structures, the RoboSurf program residing at the user's terminal parses the data and displays the nodes in the structure in its Schedule window 2 (shown in Figure 7). In response to the user's request a show structure is then presented to the user by either a RoboSurf program as described in reference with Fig. 4 or by a RoboSites program as described in reference with Fig. 3.

The following description of an exemplary filtering technique used by Firefly.net was obtained from their Web site at http://www.firefly.net/products/CollaborativeFiltering.html#Summary. Collaborative filtering technology is a powerful technology that can effectively address the problem of information and content overload, especially in highly subjective domains. Collaborative filtering systems use human intelligence instead of machine intelligence to address the limitations of content-based filtering systems. By leveraging human opinions, collaborative filtering systems automate the word of mouth process among users. Automated Collaborative Filtering (ACF) systems automate the word of mouth process on a global scale across hundreds of thousands of users and catalog items. Most ACF systems recommend items using the following three step process:

1. Capture a set of opinions from the user in the form of numerical ratings for items
2. Compute a set of "nearest neighbor users" for the user. These nearest neighbor users are users with opinions most like the given user.
3. Use the nearest neighbors ratings to compute a set of recommendations for the given user.

While standard ACF systems are effective in subjective domains, they suffer from certain limitations that may cause them to make incorrect conclusions in broad domains. This is mainly due to their tendency to ignore information about the items being recommended, even when such information is readily available.

Feature-Guided Automated Collaborative Filtering (FGACF) is Firefly Network Inc.'s powerful technology that combines the benefits of collaborative filtering with those of content-based filtering to overcome the limitations that affect standard ACF systems. FGACF utilizes simple feature information about items in a catalog to dynamically partition the space of items on a personalized basis, so as to more effectively apply the ACF algorithm in the appropriate sub-space.

Designers and developers of commercial collaborative filtering systems need to address several challenging issues. The foremost issue in building large scale collaborative filtering systems is the scaleability of the system. The accuracy of the underlying collaborative filtering technology, and the set of functionality offered, are important factors for designers of such systems.

Firefly Network Inc.'s Catalog Navigator product is scalable to handle loads of hundreds of thousands of users, catalog sizes in the half million range, with number of ratings in the millions, and still provide sub-second response times to queries. It has already been successfully deployed in applications on high-traffic sites. In addition, the Catalog Navigator is the only commercial implementation this powerful FGACF technology and offers one of the most comprehensive sets of catalog and community navigation functionality to a customer.

It is noted that in accordance with another embodiment of the invention, the information presented to the user based on the show structures may be reformatted in accordance with certain default structure characteristics. For example, such reformatting may include the tasks, such as : making Web resources more reader-friendly when using RoboSurf, RoboSites or RoboGuide programs, by utilizing formatting parameters, such as restraining page size to a default screen size and cuing automatic playing of audio upon displaying a new page; providing "Play," "Stop," "Forward," "Reverse," and "Pause" indications to facilitate the user's viewing of a show presentation; making pages into parts of a of content; providing information tags relating to the duration that a content is going to be displayed on the user's terminal; and, encoding pages with certain demographic and keyword-based information to aid the filtering operations explained above.

Table 1 shows an exemplary HTML code that may be added in accordance with one embodiment of the invention, to the Web resources or other content that is being reformatted. Note that the HTML of a page can be altered in this way between downloading it from a server and presenting it to the user. This "Tagging" process only requires a few milliseconds and can be done on the fly.

Essentially, this module uses the abilities of a HTML page publishing package like Pagemill from Adobe (www.adobe.com) to add HTML code of the type shown in Table 1.

Figure 6 is a flow chart diagram that is useful for describing the operation of a RoboPublisher program, which is the publishing tool used to create and modify show structures for viewing via RoboGuide, RoboSurf and/or Robosites. The first step represents activities occurring at the user's computer 12. At step 200 the user access the program described in this flowchart. At step 210 the user selects between editing an existing show structure or creating a new one. This can be an existing structure that has been previously made, or a structure that another content provider has published. If the user is creating a new structure, the resources, or nodes of the structure, can be gathered from their local hard drive or server or from a remote server.

At step 212 the user is presented with a dialog box. At step 214 the user is presented with the dialog box options for setting general preferences for all of the resources that will be linked in the structure, such as duration for all resources, duration estimate based on word count, and default " page turn" sound to accompany an automatic resource delivery.

At step 216 the user has chosen to load a previously defined structure, and, at step 218 the computer requests and loads the structure from the local or remote drive. Beginning at step

220 the user has many options, presented by an interface that will allow the user to choose to "Add, Edit or Cut" a node for the structure they are building. This can be accomplished graphically, as shown for example, in Figures 6A or via a list. In step 222 the user may Add a node from a standard dialog box that enables browsing from all available drives and from a special cache area that RoboSites, RoboSurf and/or Robosites produce. This cache area allows users to collect URLs from the Internet by, for example, browsing, implementing searches, or culling their e-mail for additional show structures. At step 224 the user adds the node at the chosen spot in the structure.

At step 226 the user has the option to commit to changes or cancel and start again. At step 228 the Modify Choice selection gives the user options 230 to edit the parameters of the "next" node (i.e. changing the next node destination or previous node in the structure from, for example, a local news link to a local weather link). The duration choice pertains to how long the node will be displayed before a subsequent node is loaded. This can be done on a per resource basis, since some resources require more time than others. The expiration option allows the publisher to choose a "kill date" for the node, automatically triggering a replacement search, or a skip to next action. This is useful for dated information such as weather.

At step 232 the user has the option to delete a node from the structure. Again, this can be done graphically (as shown in Figure 6A) or via a list. This step leads to step 234 where the previous structure is linked to the node that succeeds the deleted node . Step 236 allows the user to choose to continue adding, editing and/or cutting by branching back either to step 220 or 238, to save the work and/or export it for a preview or viewing by others. If the user does not choose to save or export, then, at step 244, the program reverts to the last saved version or cancels the session. If the user does export then, at step 240 the program writes the changes to the local disk 36 (shown in Figure 2). The RoboSites program may, in turn, write header information to the files to which the user may access locally or even to remote server files. It should be noted that the writing of header information into the HTML documents is an option, providing a convenience for RoboSurf and Robosites programs. The page playing actions can be achieved without this header information present. The publisher completes its work at step 242 where it gives the option to preview for the publisher using RoboCast browser enhancements, or to publish for other RoboCast product users.

Figure 7 is a screen diagram of the interface presented by the RoboSurf program. Item 1 on the screen is an interface to the Profiler program. This program allows a user to specify several profiles for RoboSurf. The user may select from prepared profiles, for individuals or groups for example, "Internet Professional," "Lawyer," "Student," "Family.1" and "Girl: Preschool" and modify these or create a new profile. In the Profiler window, the User field allows a name to be attached to the profile. The Schedule field allows a user to associate the profile with a particular structure, also referred to as a Schedule. In this instance, the structure of URLs being displayed in the Schedule window 2 is named "After Dinner."

The Reviews field allows a user to specify one of several sources for website or show structure reviews. Using the Ratings field, the user can specify limitations on the type of website or structure that will be reviewed using the familiar MPAA rating system. The Censor Level field may be used to control the Web content that the user will see. Different Censor Levels will allow different types of content to be displayed. The RoboSurf program may compare the specified Censor Level to voluntary content ratings obtained from the Web resources or it may interface with an existing content monitoring system such as Cyber Patrol to ensure that undesirable content is blocked. The final field in the Profiler window allows a user to specify a Help or Guide function. It is contemplated that both text-oriented and voice synthesized help would be available. For voice-synthesized help, the user may identify a particular voice with a name (e.g. "Chris") as shown in Figure 7.

Item 2 in Figure 7 is the Schedule window. As described above, this window shows the current structure of URLs that is being displayed by RoboSurf. The window contains a brief textual description of each URL and a time in hours and minutes and seconds for which content provided from the URL will be displayed. The URL from which content is currently being displayed is highlighted. Each URL in the schedule list also includes a small box which is marked with an "x" after a URL has been viewed and may be marked with a " " to indicate that the user wants to return to this site.

Item 3 in Figure 7 are controls for volume, channel and speed. The volume control works as would be expected to increase or decrease the level of sound provided. The Channel button allows a viewer to move a pointer up and down in the channel window to select a new channel. As used in this description, a "channel" is a collection of resources, such as web pages, which are linked into a structure by a content provider. The Speed button allows a user to specify the amount of time between the content of resources. The "*" button on each of the volume, channel and speed buttons brings up a separate dialog box in which specific entries may be entered manually.

Item 4 in Figure 7 is the progress bar. This bar displays progress of the system in whatever it has been requested to do. During play mode, this bar displays progress through the structure as a percentage of time remaining in the display of the structure. In search mode, the bar may display progress in a search and the preparation of a show structure derived from the search. In gather mode, the bar may display the progress of the gathering operation.

Item 5 in Figure 7 are the programming bars. The Search button allows the user to establish criteria for a search of the Internet for URLs to be included in a show structure. The Pick button lets a user select categories within established information sources in order to make selections within the specified sites. Once Search Crieteria and Pick categories have been established, the Gather button retrieves information from the selected sources according to the user's criteria at a specified time and frequency. The Schedule button allows the user to group site content by topic and then set the time when specific group will be played. The Play button begins the presentation of information. In the exemplary embodiment of the invention, the Play button also lets a user set parameters such as size of the content window, length of time each item is displayed and, if RoboSurf is being used as a screen saver, screen saver activation parameters (e.g. delay time, autostart position of cursor and password).

Channel window 6 displays structure publishers that may be accessed by a "point and click" operation. This window is analogous to a "favorite places" list in a conventional browser.

Control window 7 contains buttons which allow a user to Skip backwards and forwards through the show structure displayed in the Schedule window, Play the information provided from the structure of URLs, Stop playing this information, Print the information that is currently being viewed, and Mark the current resources for later viewing.

In the exemplary embodiment of the invention, the Mark button interacts with the Play and Print buttons. While viewing contents relating to a show structure, a user may mark individual resources. After viewing the show structure , the user may specify that the marked resource be displayed again, queued for printing or displayed and printed. This feature may be activated, for example, through the play or print buttons by activating the buttons with a modifier key, for example, the right mouse button.

In addition to these buttons, the control window also includes an Add/Up button which allows a user to add resources to a structure when it is being set up in schedule mode and allows a user to move up the hypertext links that are being displayed on the screen during play mode. The Cut/Down button conversely allows a user to delete a site from the structure during schedule mode and move down the hypertext links during play mode. The function of the Surf button is described above. This button allows a user to temporarily suspend the viewing of a structure with a first button press and resume at the suspended site with a second button press. In accordance with another embodiment of the invention the functions described above in reference with Fig. 7 are embodiment in a separate remote control hardware device.

The e-mail and video phone buttons, item 9 on the display shown in Figure 7, invoke third-party software packages, one for e-mail and one for a video telephone product.
Item 10 in the display is the content window. This is where all of the content which is Found, Picked, Gathered, Reviewed, Rated, Censored, Edited and Scheduled is finally and automatically played. The process of playing the content is like television mixed with radio, newspapers and a research library.

While the invention has been described in terms of an Internet browser application which allows a user to view or create a show structure of content from various sites, it is contemplated that it may be used for other purposes. For example, the invention may be used as a jukebox to schedule and present successive audio or video recordings or to schedule and view pay-per-view movies or videos.

As illustrated in Fig. 6A a show structure of resources may be created and played in accordance with various embodiments of the invention. These resources may include, for example, various local application files on a user's computer. Thus, a user may view information relating to various executable programs in a selected arrangement on a desired schedule. A typical example, involves a user system that contains an accounting software, an on-line banking software, an Intranet e-mail program, and a calendar program. The user creates a show structure that executes each of these programs and displays the relevant information at a predetermined rate. This allows the user to automate various tasks that are currently accomplished manually. Thus, for example, the user on a daily basis can check received e-mail, followed by the user's schedule for the day, available funds in the user's bank account. The selected information are presented automatically in an organized arrangement. It is noted that in accordance with another embodiment of the invention, a show structure may include the user's local resources and other remote resources as those explained above in reference with Internet applications.

While only certain features of the invention have been illustrated and described herein, many modifications, substitutions, changes or equivalents will now occur to those skilled in the art. It is therefore, to be understood that the appended claims are intended to cover all such modifications and changes that fall within the true spirit of the invention.

PROTECTING YOUR INVENTION OUTSIDE THE UNITED STATES

Since the rights granted by a U.S. patent extend only throughout the territory of the United States and have no effect in a foreign country, an inventor who wishes patent protection in another country must apply for a patent in a specific country or in regional patent offices. Applicants may wish to consider the filing of an international application under the Patent Cooperation Treaty (PCT). An international (PCT) application generally has the same effect as a regular national patent application in each PCT-member country. The PCT process simplifies the filing of patent applications on the same invention in member countries, but does not result in a grant of "an international patent" and does not eliminate the need of applicants to file additional documents and fees in countries where patent protection is desired.

Almost every country has its own patent law, and a person desiring a patent in a particular country must make an application for patent in that country in accordance with its particular laws. Since the laws of many countries differ in various respects from the patent law of the United States, applicants are advised to seek guidance from specific foreign countries to ensure that patent rights are not lost prematurely.

Applicants also are advised that in the case of inventions made in the United States, the Director of the USPTO must issue a license before applicants can apply for a patent in a foreign country. The filing of a U.S. patent application serves as a request for a foreign filing license. The application's filing receipt contains further information and guidance as to the status of applicant's license for foreign filing.

Applicants may wish to consult the USPTO booklet, "General Information Concerning Patents" (specifically, the section entitled "Treaties and Foreign Patents") for more information on timeframes and deadlines for filing foreign patent applications. The guide is available either by contacting the USPTO Contact Center at 800-786-9199, or it can be viewed on the USPTO website at http://www.uspto.gov/web/offices/pac/doc/general/index.html.

For information on preventing theft of your intellectual property (patents, trademarks and copyrights), you may wish to consult the U.S. Government website, http://www.stopfakes.gov. Part of a Department of Commerce initiative, this website includes self-help "toolkits" giving innovators guidance on how to protect intellectual property in specific countries such as China, Korea and Mexico. For questions regarding patent enforcement issues, applicants may call the U.S. Government hotline at 1-866-999-HALT (1-866-999-4158).

LICENSE FOR FOREIGN FILING UNDER

Title 35, United States Code, Section 184

Title 37, Code of Federal Regulations, 5.11 & 5.15

GRANTED

The applicant has been granted a license under 35 U.S.C. 184, if the phrase "IF REQUIRED, FOREIGN FILING LICENSE GRANTED" followed by a date appears on this form. Such licenses are issued in all applications where the conditions for issuance of a license have been met, regardless of whether or not a license may be required as set forth in 37 CFR 5.15. The scope and limitations of this license are set forth in 37 CFR 5.15(a) unless an earlier license has been issued under 37 CFR 5.15(b). The license is subject to revocation upon written notification. The date indicated is the effective date of the license, unless an earlier license of similar scope has been granted under 37 CFR 5.13 or 5.14.

This license is to be retained by the licensee and may be used at any time on or after the effective date thereof unless it is revoked. This license is automatically transferred to any related applications(s) filed under 37 CFR 1.53(d). This license is not retroactive.

The grant of a license does not in any way lessen the responsibility of a licensee for the security of the subject matter as imposed by any Government contract or the provisions of existing laws relating to espionage and the national security or the export of technical data. Licensees should apprise themselves of current regulations especially with respect to certain countries, of other agencies, particularly the Office of Defense Trade Controls, Department of State (with respect to Arms, Munitions and Implements of War (22 CFR 121-128)); the Bureau of Industry and Security, Department of Commerce (15 CFR parts 730-774); the Office of Foreign AssetsControl, Department of Treasury (31 CFR Parts 500+) and the Department of Energy.

NOT GRANTED

No license under 35 U.S.C. 184 has been granted at this time, if the phrase "IF REQUIRED, FOREIGN FILING LICENSE GRANTED" DOES NOT appear on this form. Applicant may still petition for a license under 37 CFR 5.12, if a license is desired before the expiration of 6 months from the filing date of the application. If 6 months has lapsed from the filing date of this application and the licensee has not received any indication of a secrecy order under 35 U.S.C. 181, the licensee may foreign file the application pursuant to 37 CFR 5.15(b).

PROTECTING YOUR INVENTION OUTSIDE THE UNITED STATES

Since the rights granted by a U.S. patent extend only throughout the territory of the United States and have no effect in a foreign country, an inventor who wishes patent protection in another country must apply for a patent in a specific country or in regional patent offices. Applicants may wish to consider the filing of an international application under the Patent Cooperation Treaty (PCT). An international (PCT) application generally has the same effect as a regular national patent application in each PCT-member country. The PCT process simplifies the filing of patent applications on the same invention in member countries, but does not result in a grant of "an international patent" and does not eliminate the need of applicants to file additional documents and fees in countries where patent protection is desired.

Almost every country has its own patent law, and a person desiring a patent in a particular country must make an application for patent in that country in accordance with its particular laws. Since the laws of many countries differ in various respects from the patent law of the United States, applicants are advised to seek guidance from specific foreign countries to ensure that patent rights are not lost prematurely.

Applicants also are advised that in the case of inventions made in the United States, the Director of the USPTO must issue a license before applicants can apply for a patent in a foreign country. The filing of a U.S. patent application serves as a request for a foreign filing license. The application's filing receipt contains further information and guidance as to the status of applicant's license for foreign filing.

Applicants may wish to consult the USPTO booklet, "General Information Concerning Patents" (specifically, the section entitled "Treaties and Foreign Patents") for more information on timeframes and deadlines for filing foreign patent applications. The guide is available either by contacting the USPTO Contact Center at 800-786-9199, or it can be viewed on the USPTO website at http://www.uspto.gov/web/offices/pac/doc/general/index.html.

For information on preventing theft of your intellectual property (patents, trademarks and copyrights), you may wish to consult the U.S. Government website, http://www.stopfakes.gov. Part of a Department of Commerce initiative, this website includes self-help "toolkits" giving innovators guidance on how to protect intellectual property in specific countries such as China, Korea and Mexico. For questions regarding patent enforcement issues, applicants may call the U.S. Government hotline at 1-866-999-HALT (1-866-999-4158).

LICENSE FOR FOREIGN FILING UNDER

Title 35, United States Code, Section 184

Title 37, Code of Federal Regulations, 5.11 & 5.15

GRANTED

The applicant has been granted a license under 35 U.S.C. 184, if the phrase "IF REQUIRED, FOREIGN FILING LICENSE GRANTED" followed by a date appears on this form. Such licenses are issued in all applications where the conditions for issuance of a license have been met, regardless of whether or not a license may be required as set forth in 37 CFR 5.15. The scope and limitations of this license are set forth in 37 CFR 5.15(a) unless an earlier license has been issued under 37 CFR 5.15(b). The license is subject to revocation upon written notification. The date indicated is the effective date of the license, unless an earlier license of similar scope has been granted under 37 CFR 5.13 or 5.14.

This license is to be retained by the licensee and may be used at any time on or after the effective date thereof unless it is revoked. This license is automatically transferred to any related applications(s) filed under 37 CFR 1.53(d). This license is not retroactive.

The grant of a license does not in any way lessen the responsibility of a licensee for the security of the subject matter as imposed by any Government contract or the provisions of existing laws relating to espionage and the national security or the export of technical data. Licensees should apprise themselves of current regulations especially with respect to certain countries, of other agencies, particularly the Office of Defense Trade Controls, Department of State (with respect to Arms, Munitions and Implements of War (22 CFR 121-128)); the Bureau of Industry and Security, Department of Commerce (15 CFR parts 730-774); the Office of Foreign AssetsControl, Department of Treasury (31 CFR Parts 500+) and the Department of Energy.

NOT GRANTED

No license under 35 U.S.C. 184 has been granted at this time, if the phrase "IF REQUIRED, FOREIGN FILING LICENSE GRANTED" DOES NOT appear on this form. Applicant may still petition for a license under 37 CFR 5.12, if a license is desired before the expiration of 6 months from the filing date of the application. If 6 months has lapsed from the filing date of this application and the licensee has not received any indication of a secrecy order under 35 U.S.C. 181, the licensee may foreign file the application pursuant to 37 CFR 5.15(b).

DETAILED ACTION

1. Claims 1-30 are rejected.

Information Disclosure Statement

2. The information disclosure statements (IDS) submitted on 24 April 2012, 1 May 2012 and 12 June 2012 are being considered by the examiner. The Applicant is reminded of the required format for listing non-patent literature on the IDS.

Some of the information disclosure statements fail to comply with 37 CFR 1.98(a)(2), which requires a legible copy of each cited foreign patent document; each non-patent literature publication or that portion which caused it to be listed; and all other information or that portion which caused it to be listed. Several of the references have been crossed out since a copy of the article has been not provided and therefore has not been considered. Also, publication dates have not been provided for a plurality of the references. It is required that dates be provided for each of the documents.

Specification

3. The disclosure is objected to because of the following informalities:

The disclosure is objected to because it contains an embedded hyperlink and/or other form of browser-executable code. See at least the following: page 9, line 20; page 11, line 2; page 25, line 4; and page 27, line 11. Applicant is required to delete the embedded hyperlink and/or other form of browser-executable code. See MPEP § 608.01.

The use of the trademarks Pointcast, Netscape and Microsoft have been noted in this application. Each should be capitalized wherever they appear and be accompanied by the generic terminology. Although the use of trademarks is permissible in patent applications, the proprietary nature of the marks should be respected and every effort made to prevent their use in any manner which might adversely affect their validity as trademarks.

Appropriate correction is required.

Drawings

4. The drawings are objected to as failing to comply with 37 CFR 1.84(p)(5) because they include the following reference character(s) not mentioned in the description: items 98 & 100 (Fig 3), item 156 (Fig 5) and item 8 (Fig 7).

5. Figure 6 is objected to because it appears based on page 29, lines 19-20 of the Specification that the step "loop to add/cut/edit" should be labeled as item 236 instead of 226. Once this is corrected, then item 226 will be in page 29, line 9 of the Specification but not depicted in the drawing.

6. Corrected drawing sheets in compliance with 37 CFR 1.121(d), or amendment to the specification to add the reference character(s) in the description in compliance with 37 CFR 1.121(b) are required in reply to the Office action to avoid abandonment of the application. Any amended replacement drawing sheet should include all of the figures appearing on the immediate prior version of the sheet, even if only one figure is being amended. Each drawing sheet submitted after the filing date of an application must be labeled in the top margin as either “Replacement Sheet” or “New Sheet” pursuant to 37 CFR 1.121(d). If the changes are not accepted by the examiner, the applicant will be notified and informed of any required corrective action in the next Office action. The objection to the drawings will not be held in abeyance.

Double Patenting

7. The nonstatutory double patenting rejection is based on a judicially created doctrine grounded in public policy (a policy reflected in the statute) so as to prevent the unjustified or improper timewise extension of the “right to exclude” granted by a patent and to prevent possible harassment by multiple assignees. A nonstatutory obviousness-type double patenting rejection is appropriate where the conflicting claims are not identical, but at least one examined application claim is not patentably distinct from the reference claim(s) because the examined application claim is either anticipated by, or would have been obvious over, the reference claim(s). See, e.g., In re Berg, 140 F.3d 1428, 46 USPQ2d 1226 (Fed. Cir. 1998); In re Goodman, 11 F.3d 1046, 29 USPQ2d 2010 (Fed. Cir. 1993); In re Longi, 759 F.2d 887, 225 USPQ 645 (Fed. Cir. 1985); In re Van Ornum, 686 F.2d 937, 214 USPQ 761 (CCPA 1982); In re Vogel, 422 F.2d 438, 164 USPQ 619 (CCPA 1970); and In re Thorington, 418 F.2d 528, 163 USPQ 644 (CCPA 1969).

A timely filed terminal disclaimer in compliance with 37 CFR 1.321(c) or 1.321(d) may be used to overcome an actual or provisional rejection based on a nonstatutory double patenting ground provided the conflicting application or patent either is shown to be commonly owned with this application, or claims an invention made as a result of activities undertaken within the scope of a joint research agreement.

Effective January 1, 1994, a registered attorney or agent of record may sign a terminal disclaimer. A terminal disclaimer signed by the assignee must fully comply with 37 CFR 3.73(b).

8. Claims 1-30 are provisionally rejected on the ground of nonstatutory obviousness-type double patenting as being unpatentable over claims 10-22 of copending Application No. 13/495,172. Although the conflicting claims are not identical, they are not patentably distinct from each other because it would have been obvious to display the advertisements in the different manners such as before the displaying of the content since the difference is merely design choice.

This is a provisional obviousness-type double patenting rejection because the conflicting claims have not in fact been patented.

This is a provisional obviousness-type double patenting rejection because the conflicting claims have not in fact been patented.

11. Claims 1-30 are rejected on the ground of nonstatutory obviousness-type double patenting as being unpatentable over claims 22-54 of US Patent No. 7,155,451. Although the conflicting claims are not identical, they are not patentably distinct from each other because it would have been obvious to display the advertisements in the different manners such as before the displaying of the content since the difference is merely design choice.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

12. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

> A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –
> (e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

13. Claims 1-10, 12, 13 and 23-30 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by US Patent No 5,740,549 to Reilly et al (hereafter Reilly).

Referring to claim 1, Reilly discloses a method for providing content via a communications network on a user's computer, obtained from a plurality of resources in an organized arrangement (see Fig 1 and column 3, line 66 – column 4, line 20) comprising the steps of:

creating a show structure of nodes [queues], each node identifying a resource from a plurality of accessible resources [linked lists so as to generate queues of news items and queues of advertisements] (see Figs 8 & 9 and column 12, line 6 – column 13, line 25), at least some of which are network accessible resources (see column 4, lines 8-14 and column 8, lines 19-35 – the content is retrieved via the Internet);

without requiring user input [an administration manager 180 schedules and controls all communications with the information server 104], automatically accessing a plurality of said network accessible resources identified by a corresponding node [The default connection schedule is for the subscriber's computer to initiate a connection to the information server once during the middle of the night for an “administrative update,” and once every four hours during the rest of the day for “news story updates.” During the administrative update connection, the set of advertisements, scripts and images in the subscriber computer’s local information database are updated as necessary, and any software upgrades are also downloaded onto the subscriber’s computer … the profiler 206 can be used to specify a connection schedule other than the default schedule] (see column 6, lines 37-45 and column 8, lines 19-44);

causing content corresponding to each of said accessed resources to be automatically presented through said user's computer in accordance with said show structure [whenever the system detects a lack of user inputs via either keyboard or pointer device for a user configurable or otherwise specified length of time, the screen saver procedures of the present invention begin the display of news items and advertisements from the local information database] (see column 11, lines 40-63); and causing advertisement content to be presented to said user in connection with said automatic presentation of said content through said user's computer [Each advertisement is displayed on subscribers’ workstations simultaneously with news items assigned to the same category as the advertisement] (Reilly: see column 4, line 66 – column 5, line 4).

Referring to claim 2, Reilly discloses the method as claimed in claim 1, wherein said advertisement content is dynamic content [Each advertisement is displayed on subscribers’ workstations simultaneously with news items assigned to the same category as the advertisement] (Reilly: see column 4, line 66 – column 5, line 4 – the advertisements are construed by the examiner as being dynamic since the particular advertisement displayed depends on which news item is displayed).

Referring to claim 3, Reilly discloses the method as claimed in claim 1, wherein said advertisement content is a default set of advertisement content [the advertisements are either permanently embedded in the computer programs or reside permanently with computer programs] (see column 1, line 66 – column 2, line 3 – since the advertisements are permanent and cannot be targeted, they are considered to be default).

Referring to claim 4, Reilly discloses the method as claimed in claim 1, wherein said show structure of nodes is interspersed with said advertisement content [in other embodiments advertisements and news items could be displayed sequentially] (Reilly: see column 11, lines 30-37).

Referring to claim 5, Reilly discloses the method as claimed in claim 1, wherein said advertisement, content is presented in a persistent content window [advertisements are always simultaneously displayed with news items] (Reilly: see Fig 6, column 9, line 65 - column 10, line 9 – at least item 232 is considered to represent a persistent window).

Referring to claim 6, Reilly discloses the method as claimed in claim 1, wherein said advertisement content is presented using a node in said show structure of nodes [linked lists so as to generate queues of news items and queues of advertisements] (see Figs 8 & 9 and column 12, line 6 – column 13, line 25).

Referring to claim 7, Reilly discloses the method in accordance with claim 1, wherein said advertisement content is presented using a URL [“clicking" on the advertisement to connect to the advertiser’s World Wide Web page] (see column 6, lines 4-10).

Referring to claim 8, Reilly discloses the method with accordance with claim 1, further comprising the step of providing said advertisement content in accordance with a user's profile [Each advertisement is displayed on subscribers’ workstations simultaneously with news items assigned to the same category as the advertisement] (Reilly: see column 4, line 66 – column 5, line 4 and column 9, lines 37-62 – The news articles are targeted to a user based on a user profile. Since the chosen advertisements are directly correlated to the news items, the advertisements are also construed by the examiner as being dependent on the user profile).

Referring to claim 9, Reilly discloses the method in accordance with claim 1, wherein said advertisement content is a resource accessible via the Internet [if the user clicks on the displayed advertisement, the subscriber’s computer is automatically connected to the an associated World Wide Web page on the Internet that provides additional information from the advertiser] (Reilly: see column 14, lines 7-11).

Referring to claim 10, Reilly discloses the method in accordance with claim 1, wherein said advertisement content is a resource accessible via an Internet website [if the user clicks on the displayed advertisement, the subscriber’s computer is automatically connected to the an associated World Wide Web page on the Internet that provides additional information from the advertiser] (Reilly: see column 14, lines 7-11).

Referring to claim 12, Reilly discloses the method in accordance with claim 1, wherein said advertisement content is displayable content [the downloading of advertisements (which are typically images)] (Reilly: see column 8, lines 45-46 – images are construed by the examiner as representing displayable content).

Referring to claim 13, Reilly discloses the method in accordance with claim 1, further comprising the step of altering the show structure in response to user action related to said advertisement content (see column 5, line 61 – column 6, line 10 and Table 1).

Referring to claim 23, Reilly discloses a method for providing content via a communications network on a user's computer, obtained from a plurality of resources in an organized arrangement (see Fig 1 and column 3, line 66 – column 4, line 20) comprising the steps of:

creating a show structure of nodes [queues], each node identifying a resource from a plurality of accessible resources [linked lists so as to generate queues of news items and queues of advertisements] (see Figs 8 & 9 and column 12, line 6 – column 13, line 25), at least some of which are network accessible resources (see column 4, lines 8-14 and column 8, lines 19-35 – the content is retrieved via the Internet);

without requiring user input [an administration manager 180 schedules and controls all communications with the information server 104], automatically accessing a plurality of said network accessible resources identified by a corresponding node [The default connection schedule is for the subscriber's computer to initiate a connection to the information server once during the middle of the night for an "administrative update," and once every four hours during the rest of the day for “news story updates.” During the administrative update connection, the set of advertisements, scripts and images in the subscriber computer’s local information database are updated as necessary, and any software upgrades are also downloaded onto the subscriber’s computer … the profiler 206 can be used to specify a connection schedule other than the default schedule] (see column 6, lines 37-45 and column 8, lines 19-44);

causing content corresponding to each of said accessed resources to be automatically presented through said user's computer in accordance with said show structure [whenever the system detects a lack of user inputs via either keyboard or pointer device for a user configurable or otherwise specified length of time, the screen saver procedures of the present invention begin the display of news items and advertisements from the local information database] (see column 11, lines 40-63); and causing advertisement content to be presented to said user in a persistent content window [advertisements are always simultaneously displayed with news items] (see Fig 6, column 9, line 65 - column 10, line 9 – at least item 232 is considered to represent a persistent window) in connection with said automatic presentation of said content through said user's computer [Each advertisement is displayed on subscribers’ workstations simultaneously with news items assigned to the same category as the advertisement] (see column 4, line 66 – column 5, line 4).

Referring to claim 24, Reilly discloses the method as claimed in claim 23, wherein said content corresponding to each of said accessed resources is displayed through said user's computer and wherein said persistent content window is a separate window from said displayed content (see Fig 6, column 9, line 65 - column 10, line 9 – at least item 232 is considered to represent an advertisement persistent window and items 230a-c are considered to represent the accessed resources).

Referring to claim 25, Reilly discloses the method as claimed in claim 23, wherein said persistent content window is displayed simultaneously with said displayed content presented through said user's computer [advertisements are always simultaneously displayed with news items] (Reilly: see Fig 6, column 9, line 65 - column 10, line 9).

Referring to claim 26, Reilly discloses a method for providing content via a communications network on a user's computer, obtained from a plurality of resources in an organized arrangement (see Fig 1 and column 3, line 66 – column 4, line 20) comprising the steps of:

creating a show structure of nodes [queues], each node identifying a resource from a plurality of accessible resources [linked lists so as to generate queues of news items and queues of advertisements] (see Figs 8 & 9 and column 12, line 6 – column 13, line 25), at least some of which are network accessible resources (see column 4, lines 8-14 and column 8, lines 19-35 – the content is retrieved via the Internet);

without requiring user input [an administration manager 180 schedules and controls all communications with the information server 104], automatically accessing a plurality of said network accessible resources identified by a corresponding node [The default connection schedule is for the subscriber's computer to initiate a connection to the information server once during the middle of the night for an "administrative update," and once every four hours during the rest of the day for “news story updates.” During the administrative update connection, the set of advertisements, scripts and images in the subscriber computer’s local information database are updated as necessary, and any software upgrades are also downloaded onto the subscriber’s computer … the profiler 206 can be used to specify a connection schedule other than the default schedule] (see column 6, lines 37-45 and column 8, lines 19-44);

causing content corresponding to each of said accessed resources to be automatically presented through said user's computer in accordance with said show structure [whenever the system detects a lack of user inputs via either keyboard or pointer device for a user configurable or otherwise specified length of time, the screen saver procedures of the present invention begin the display of news items and advertisements from the local information database] (see column 11, lines 40-63); and causing targeted advertisement content to be presented to said user in connection with said automatic presentation of said content through said user's computer [Each advertisement is displayed on subscribers’ workstations simultaneously with news items assigned to the same category as the advertisement] (Reilly: see column 4, line 66 – column 5, line 4 and column 9, lines 37-62 – The news articles are targeted to a user based on a user profile. Since the chosen advertisements are directly correlated to the news items, the advertisements are also construed by the examiner as being dependent on the user profile).

Referring to claim 27, Reilly discloses the method as claimed in claim 26, wherein said targeted advertisement content is based on a user profile [Each advertisement is displayed on subscribers' workstations simultaneously with news items assigned to the same category as the advertisement] (Reilly: see column 4, line 66 – column 5, line 4 and column 9, lines 37-62 – The news articles are targeted to a user based on a user profile. Since the chosen advertisements are directly correlated to the news items, the advertisements are also construed by the examiner as being dependent on the user profile).

Referring to claim 28, Reilly discloses a method as claimed in claim 27, wherein said profile includes past actions taken by said user (see column 9, lines 18-33).

Referring to claim 29, Reilly discloses a method as claimed in claim 28, wherein said targeting of said advertisement content is based on past skipping actions taken by said user on previously presented advertisement content, stored in said user profile (see column 9, lines 11-33 and column 14, lines 7-11).

Referring to claim 30, Reilly discloses a method as claimed in claim 26, wherein targeted advertisement content is selected based on said content in said show structure of nodes [Each advertisement is displayed on subscribers' workstations simultaneously with news items assigned to the same category as the advertisement] (Reilly: see column 4, line 66 – column 5, line 4).

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

14. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

> (a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negatived by the manner in which the invention was made.

15. Claim 11 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over US Patent No 5,740,549 to Reilly et al as applied to claim 1 above, and further in view of US Patent No 5,668,788 to Allison (hereafter Allison).

Referring to claim 11, while Reilly discloses the presentation of advertisements, Reilly fails to explicitly disclose the further limitation wherein said advertisement content is video content. Allison discloses the playing of content and advertisements for a user, including the further limitation wherein said advertisement content is video content [video materials such as advertisements … may be economically incorporated into the system] (see column 3, lines 8-13).

It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention to have the data type of the advertisement disclosed by Reilly be a video type in the manner disclosed by Allison. One would have been motivated to do so since the format type is merely a design choice and the concept of video enhances value by sparking user interest in the content.

16. Claim 14 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over US Patent No 5,740,549 to Reilly et al as applied to claim 1 above, and further in view of the background of US Patent No 6,769,009 to Reisman (hereafter Reisman).

Referring to claim 15, while Reilly discloses the presentation of content on a user computer, Reilly fails to explicitly state that the computer is a mobile device.

Reisman discloses the distribution of information to a plurality of user stations, including the further limitation wherein said computer is a mobile device [PDA] (see column 1, line 63 – column 2, line 8).

It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention to utilize a PDA as the computer of Reilly. One would have been motivated to do so since Reilly states that the computer can be any type of computer (Reilly: see column 4, lines 16-20).

17. Claim 15 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over US Patent No 5,740,549 to Reilly et al as applied to claim 1 above, and further in view of US Patent No 6,769,009 to Reisman (hereafter Reisman).

Referring to claim 15, while Reilly discloses the presentation of content using the Internet, Reilly fails to explicitly state the further limitation wherein said content is presented through said user's computer using a web browser. Reisman discloses the distribution of information to a plurality of user stations each configured for communications with a multiplicity of servers via a non-proprietary network (see abstract), including the further limitation wherein said content is presented through said user's computer using a web browser [at least one web browser at least one of said user stations to retrieve and view information objects] (see column 36, lines 18-22).

It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to display the content of Reilly utilizing a web browser in the manner disclosed by Reisman. One would have been motivated to do so since it is well known in the art at the time of the invention that a web browser is a mechanism which provides standard graphical user interface and data presentation functions to allow for web pages to be accessed and viewed.

18. Claims 16-18 and 22 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over US Patent No 5,740,549 to Reilly et al in view of US Patent No 6,026,368 to Brown et al (hereafter Brown).

Referring to claim 16, Reilly discloses a method for providing content via a communications network on a user's computer, obtained from a plurality of resources in an organized arrangement (see Fig 1 and column 3, line 66 – column 4, line 20) comprising the steps of:

creating a show structure of nodes [queues], each node identifying a resource from a plurality of accessible resources [linked lists so as to generate queues of news items and queues of advertisements] (see Figs 8 & 9 and column 12, line 6 – column 13, line 25), at least some of which are network accessible resources (see column 4, lines 8-14 and column 8, lines 19-35 – the content is retrieved via the Internet);

without requiring user input [an administration manager 180 schedules and controls all communications with the information server 104], automatically accessing a plurality of said network accessible resources identified by a corresponding node [The default connection schedule is for the subscriber's computer to initiate a connection to the information server once during the middle of the night for an "administrative update," and once every four hours during the rest of the day for "news story updates." During the administrative update connection, the set of advertisements, scripts and images in the subscriber computer's local information database are updated as necessary, and any software upgrades are also downloaded onto the subscriber's computer … the profiler 206 can be used to specify a connection schedule other than the default schedule] (see column 6, lines 37-45 and column 8, lines 19-44);

causing content corresponding to each of said accessed resources to be automatically presented through said user's computer in accordance with said show structure [whenever the system detects a lack of user inputs via either keyboard or pointer device for a user configurable or otherwise specified length of time, the screen saver procedures of the present invention begin the display of news items and advertisements from the local information database] (see column 11, lines 40-63); and causing advertisement content to be presented to said user in connection with said automatic presentation of said content through said user's computer [Each advertisement is displayed on subscribers' workstations simultaneously with news items assigned to the same category as the advertisement] (Reilly: see column 4, line 66 – column 5, line 4).

While Reilly discloses the creation of the structure of nodes, Reilly fails to explicitly disclose the further limitations of receiving a request for an online search from a remote user; providing a plurality of search results and their corresponding resource locators in response to said request, and creating the show structure of nodes based on said search result. Brown discloses receiving a request for an online search from a remote user [Through a set of standard function calls that are imbedded in the applications of the communications service, these applications send requests for content segment play lists to the on-line queue manager 20. The requests identify the current subscriber ...] (see Fig 1 and column 4, lines 3-15); providing a plurality of search results [The on-line queue manager 20 returns a play list of content segments] and their corresponding resource locators [content location] in response to said request (see column 3, lines 28-62; column 4, lines 3-15; and column 6, lines 28-42), and creating the show structure of nodes based on said search result [playlist] (see column 3, lines 28-62; column 4, lines 3-15; and column 6, lines 28-42).

It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention to utilize the process of creating a playlist as disclosed by Brown as the way in which to schedule the content of Reilly. One would have been motivated to do so in order to allow for the user to have explicit control of the content that is presented to them.

Referring to claim 17, the combination of Reilly and Brown (hereafter Reilly/Brown) discloses the method in accordance with claim 16, wherein said user request comprises a search of accessible Internet content [content in a computer mediated communication network] (Brown: see column 3, lines 23-26).

Referring to claim 18, Reilly/Brown discloses the method in accordance with claim 16, wherein said user request comprises a search of a web site [content in a computer mediated communication network] (Brown: see column 3, lines 23-26).

Referring to claim 22, Reilly/Brown discloses the method in accordance with claim 16, wherein the step of causing the presentation of said retrieved content automatically in accordance with said show structure includes the presentation of content from at least two nodes presented simultaneously [advertisements are always simultaneously displayed with news items] (Reilly: see Fig 6, column 9, line 65 - column 10, line 9).

19. Claims 20 and 21 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over US Patent No 5,740,549 to Reilly et al in view of US Patent No 6,026,368 to Brown et al as applied to claim 16 above and further in view of US Patent No 5,751,672 to Yankowski (hereafter Yankowski).

Referring to claim 20, Reilly/Brown fails to explicitly disclose the further limitation wherein said show structure is presented to said user. Yankowski discloses allowing a user to search for content and build a playlist (see column 9, line 37 – column 10, line 3), including the further limitation wherein said show structure is presented to said user [playlist] (see column 10, lines 24-63).

It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention to present the schedule/playlist of Reilly/Brown to the user in the manner disclosed by Yankowski. One would have been motivated to do so in order to allow the user to interact with the playlist to increase user control over the content displayed.

Referring to claim 21, the combination of Reilly/Brown and Yankowski discloses the method in accordance with claim 20, wherein said show structure is presented to said user while said content is being delivered (Yankowski: see column 10, lines 24-63).

Amendments to the Specification

Please amend paragraph [0001] as follows:

"This application is a continuation of U.S. patent application Ser. No. 11/316,209, filed on Dec. 21, 2005 which is a continuation of U.S. Pat. No. 7,155,451, filed on Sep. 1, 1998, which in turn is a Continuation-in-Part Application of U.S. patent application Ser. No. 08/922,063, filed on Sep. 2, 1997, which claims the benefit of priority from U.S. Provisional Patent Application No. 60/025,360, filed on Sep. 3, 1996, the entirety of which are incorporated herein by reference. This application is related to U.S. Patent Application No. 13/495,172, filed June 13, 2012 and U.S. Patent Application No. 13/176,618, filed on July 2, 2011, both of which are also co-pending continuation applications from the same parent U.S. Patent No. 11/316,209."

Please amend paragraph [0028] as follows:

"Content accessed by the browser may not be in a file on a remote computer but may be generated by the remote computer and transmitted to the user directly. Much of the data that may be accessed by a browser on a remote computer is classified by Multipurpose Internet Mail Extension (MIME) type. One MIME type is an HTML file, another is a JPEG file, a still picture that is encoded according to the standard developed by the Joint Picture Experts Group. Mime types can also be proprietary data. In this instance, the browser may need to be configured with a "plug-in" program in order to decode and present the proprietary data. An example of such a plug-in is the Macromedia.TM. flash technology which allows streaming animation to be displayed with accompanying audio. For more information on MIME types, see Netscape's User Handbook ~~at http://home.netscape.com/eng/mozilla/1.1/handbook/docs/answers.html~~, HTTP (HyperText Transfer Protocol) servers use HTML formatting. Netscape software has the built-in capability to read HTML-formatted pages (as well as the GIF, JPEG, and XBM graphic file formats). Netscape can interpret many other file formats with the help of external helper applications. To accommodate the file formats requiring helper applications, Netscape keeps a mapping of file formats to helper applications. MIME (Multipurpose Internet Mail Extensions) is a standardized method for organizing divergent file formats. The method organizes file formats according to the file's MIME type. When Netscape software retrieves a file from a server, the server provides the MIME type of the file. Netscape uses the MIME type to establish whether the file format can be read by the software's built-in capabilities or, if not, whether a suitable helper application is available to read the file."

Please amend paragraph [0031] as follows:

"Thus, the software that creates the show structure allows the show originator, to encode the identity of its creator. Furthermore, a mechanism is employed to automatically verify that the show structure comprising the show has not been tampered with. In one exemplary implementation, this is accomplished by using cryptographic techniques; for example the Digital Signature Initiative ~~(e.f. http://w3c.org/Dsig/Overview.html)~~. The identity of the show originator is thus represented by a digital signature. The security status of the currently selected show structure is then visible at all times to the user. If a user chooses to edit a sequence of a show, the previously attached signature will be discarded and the user will be made aware of it's new unsigned status."

Please amend paragraph [0053] as follows:

"If at step 90 it is determined that the next URL does not relate to a show structure, then at step 98, after the user decision is recorded at step 93, the chain session is ended at step 98 and the roboguide screen saver is started at step 100. If the next URL does relate to a show structure, then at [[At]] step 94 the system requests the next resource in the show structure and returns to step 74 described above. It is noted that in accordance with another embodiment of the invention, it is possible to change the course of events to be displayed to the viewer by substituting next resource request at step 94 with a previous resource request. For example, if the forward going display provides a first URL content relating to weather forecast to a second URL content relating to sports news, the reverse going display provides the sports news before the weather forecast."

Please amend paragraph [0069] as follows:

"At step 155 the program employs a filtering technique to create the customized show structure. An exemplary filtering process may be that which is available from Firefly.net, described below. This filtering is based on rating the resources (e.g. rating a cat food advertisement as inappropriate if the user profile does not indicate that the user has a cat or if the user indicates disinterest in cat food advertisements either explicitly by clicking on an on-screen "button" (not shown) indicating disinterest or implicitly as may be inferred from a pattern of skipping over cat food advertisements when they are presented). The information generated by the Profiler program is fed to the server based on "cookie technology," a common-method of maintaining information about a client on the web. The server reads the cookie for preferences and date information then feeds a personalized request to the database which sends a dynamically generated list of URLs to the user at step 156."

Please amend paragraph [0071] as follows:

"The following description of an exemplary filtering technique used by Firefly.net was obtained from their Web site at ~~http://www.firefly.net/products/CollaborativeFiltering.html#Summary~~. Collaborative filtering technology is a powerful technology that can effectively address the problem of information and content overload, especially in highly subjective domains. Collaborative filtering systems use human intelligence instead of machine intelligence to address the limitations of content-based filtering systems. By leveraging human opinions, collaborative filtering systems automate the word of mouth process among users. Automated Collaborative Filtering (ACF) systems automate the word of mouth process on a global scale across hundreds of thousands of users and catalog items. Most ACF systems recommend items using the following three step process:

1. Capture a set of opinions from the user in the form of numerical ratings for items 2. Compute a set of "nearest neighbor users" for the user. These nearest neighbor users are users with opinions most like the given user. 3. Use the nearest neighbors ratings to compute a set of recommendations for the given user. While standard ACF systems are effective in subjective domains, they suffer from certain limitations that may cause them to make incorrect conclusions in broad domains. This is mainly due to their tendency to ignore information about the items being recommended, even when such information is readily available."

Please amend paragraph [0091] as follows:

"In addition to these buttons, the control window also includes an Add/Up button which allows a user to add-resources to a structure when it is being set up in schedule mode and allows a user to move up the hypertext links that are being displayed on the screen during play mode. The Cut/Down button conversely allows a user to delete a site from the structure during schedule mode and move down the hypertext links during play mode. The function of the Surf button is described above. This button allows a user to temporarily suspend the viewing of a structure with a first button press and resume at the suspended site with a second button press. In accordance with another embodiment of the invention the functions described above in reference with FIG. 7 are embodiment in a separate remote control hardware device, item 8."

Remarks

Claims 1-30 are pending.

Claims 1-30 stand rejected.

Claims 1, 23 and 26 are amended.

Claims 1-30 are submitted herein for review.

No new matter has been added.

Applicant begins by noting that the first paragraph of the specification has been amended to cross-reference two other related applications, namely U.S. Patent Application No. 13/495,172, filed June 13, 2012 and U.S. Patent Application No. 13/176,618, filed on July 2, 2011, both of which are also co-pending continuation applications from the same parent U.S. Patent No. 11/316,209.

In paragraph 2 of the Office Action, the Examiner has indicated that some of the documents from the Information Disclosure Statement from April 24, 2012, May 1, 2012 and June 12, 2012, did not comply with 37 CFR 1.98(a)(2) because the submitted copies were not clear. Applicant is reviewing each document that was not accepted in an attempt to procure and/or scan a cleaner copy for submission in a supplemental Information Disclosure Statement(s).

Applicant notes that U.S. Patent No. 7,155,451, from which the present application claims priority to, assigned to Robocast Inc., is the subject of two litigations: 1) Robocast Inc., v. Microsoft Corporation filed on December 6, 2010 in the Delaware District Court (2010cv01055); and 2) Robocast Inc., v. Apple Inc. filed on March 21, 2011 in the Delaware District Court (2011cv00235). Applicant notes that additional prior art documents from the above identified litigations is forthcoming in additional supplemental Information Disclosure Statements.

In paragraph 3 of the Office Action, the Examiner has objected to the use of hyperlinks in the text of the specification as per 37 CFR § 1.57(d) / MPEP § 608.01. Applicants have amended paragraphs [0028], [0031] and [0071] to remove such hyperlinks and respectfully request that these objections be withdrawn. Regarding the use of the trademarks Pointcast, Netscape and Microsoft in the specification text, Applicant notes that the first instance of use in paragraph [0006] correctly indicates their trademark status and the terms are appropriately capitalized throughout the application.

In paragraph 4 of the Office Action, the Examiner has objected to the drawing (Figure 3) because the element numbers 98 and 100 are not described in the corresponding specification. Applicant has amended the corresponding paragraph [0053] to appropriately recite the shown steps of 98 and 100 in the text of the specification. Regarding the objection to Figure 5, Applicant has amended the corresponding paragraph [0069] to appropriately recite the shown step 156 in the text of the specification. Regarding the objection to Figure 7, Applicant has amended the corresponding paragraph [0091] to appropriately recite the shown step 156 in the text of the specification. Applicant respectfully requests that these objections be withdrawn.

Regarding the objection to Figure 6, the item # "226" in the Figure was appropriately corrected to "236." Also, Figure 6 is additionally amended to place an indicator line for item #226 to the location where the correspondingly described step 226 (option to commit to changes or cancel), as described in paragraph [0081], is applicable after each of options (222/228/232) and related actions (224/230/234).

In paragraph 8 of the Office Action, claims 1-30 are provisionally rejected under the judicially created doctrine of obviousness type double patenting over the related co-pending application No. 13/495,172. In paragraph 9 of the Office Action, claims 1-30 are provisionally rejected under the judicially created doctrine of obviousness type double patenting over the related co-pending application No. 13/176,818. In paragraph 10 of the Office Action, claims 16-22 are provisionally rejected under the judicially created doctrine of obviousness type double patenting over the parent co-pending application No. 11/316,209 (note - Examiner indicated 13/316,209 - which Applicant is construing as parent 11/316,209). In paragraph 11 of the Office Action, claims 1-30 are rejected under the judicially created doctrine of obviousness type double patenting over issued parent U.S. Patent No. 7,155,451.

Although Applicant disagrees with such rejections, and although Applicant separately notes that the present claims are amended, and in the three concurrent co-pending applications potential remarks/amendments will be submitted to the corresponding Office Actions, in order to expedite the prosecution of this application four terminal disclaimers are attached hereto. Applicant respectfully requests that these rejections be withdrawn.

Turning to the prior art, the Examiner has issued the following rejections:

1) Claims 1-10, 12, 13 and 23-30 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. § 102(b) as being anticipated by U.S. Patent No. 5,740,549 to Reilly;

2) Claim 11 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. § 103(a) as being unpatentable over Reilly in view of U.S. Patent No. 5,668,788 to Allison;

3) Claim 14 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. § 103(a) as being unpatentable over Reilly in view of U.S. Patent No. 6,769,009 to Reisman;

4) Claim 15 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. § 103(a) as being unpatentable over Reilly in view of Reisman;

5) Claims 16-18 and 22 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. § 103(a) as being unpatentable over

Google/YouTube Exhibit 1025/1125

Reilly in view of U.S. Patent No. 6,026,368 to Brown; and

6) Claims 20 and 21 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. § 103(a) as being unpatentable over Reilly and Brown in view of U.S. Patent No. 5,751,672 to Yankowski.

Applicant notes that the present claims 1-30 include independent claims 1, 16, 23 and 26. Of those, claims 1, 23 and 26 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. § 102(b) as being anticipated solely by the Reilly reference.

Exemplary independent claim 1 is directed to a method for providing content via a communications network on a user's computer, obtained from a plurality of resources in an organized arrangement. The method includes creating a show structure of nodes, each node identifying a resource from a plurality of accessible resources, at least some of which are network accessible resources. The method also includes, without requiring user input, automatically accessing a plurality of the network accessible resources identified by a corresponding node and causing content corresponding to each of the accessed resources to be automatically presented through the user's computer in accordance with the show structure, where the step of creating further comprises the step of providing interactively variable duration information, representing the duration that the content corresponding to the accessed resource is presented so as to enable a user to vary said duration.

The method includes causing advertisement content to be presented to the user in connection with the automatic presentation of the content through the user's computer.

Among other features independent claim 23 includes the feature that the advertisement content to be presented to the user in a persistent content window.

Among other features independent claim 26 includes the feature that targeted advertisement content is presented to the user in connection with the automatic presentation of the content.

Each of independent claims 1, 23 and 26, as amended, include the feature that the step of creating further comprises the step of providing interactively variable duration information, representing the duration that the content corresponding to the accessed resource is presented so as to enable a user to vary said duration. The duration choice pertains to how long the node will be displayed before a subsequent node is loaded on a per resource basis. See e.g. paragraph [0081]. The user can vary the duration for display of a resource while it is being displayed. See e.g. speed button in controls (3) in Schedule window (2) in Figure 7 and col. 16, lines 51-53.

The cited Reilly reference relates to an information and advertising distribution system that essentially displays information and advertisements to a subscriber computer when the subscriber's computer is idle for a certain predefined amount of time. See e.g. Reilly at col. 2, lines 28-34. The content and display duration of information and advertisement windows (e.g. widows 230a, 230b, 230c and 232 - Figure 6) are set by scripts prepared prior to presentation of content to the subscriber. See for example, Reilly at col. 5, lines 24-34 which states:

> "The information database 134 also stores a set of "display scripts" 142. A script controls the display of news items and advertisements, typically displaying a selected number of news items and one advertisement for a period of 30 seconds. A script determines the number of news items displayed, determines the positions of the news items and advertisement on the display, determines any movement of the news items around the displayed image, and determines what background image or images are displayed in conjunction with the news items."

The various "sprites" or actors (such as any one of 230a, 230b, 230c or 232) within a script having two or more sprites, the display location and duration are preconfigured. See e.g. Reilly at col. 10, line 56 to col. 11, line 4. See also Reilly at col. 11, lines 53-63. These scripts and the associated content are delivered periodically to a subscriber's computer to be displayed at a later time according to the instructions stored in the script.

From the remote user side, each subscriber views the various sprites in a script according to a predefined order such as that set out in Figures 8 and 9 and the corresponding specification. The news and/or data contained in such sprites presented to the user is a limited form "headline" data. The Examiner has pointed out in the Office Action at pg. 12 that in Figures 8 and 9 of Reilly, each entry in the queue includes a link to a second level or more detailed data that is not transmitted with the script, but is only accessible via the internet when the subscriber exits the script presentation and actively clicks the link to the second level data. See for example Reilly at col. 4, lines 50-65 describing the split data structure. See Reilly at col. 12, line 57 to col. 13, line 6 regarding the requirement of the user to actively exit the show and click through a link to access additional data.

Such an arrangement in Reilly does not, without requiring user input, automatically accesses a plurality of the network accessible resources identified by a corresponding node and causing content corresponding to each of the accessed resources to be automatically presented through the user's computer in accordance with the show structure. Even assuming arguendo that the Examiner's position on page 12 of the Office Action is correct that the links from Figures 8 and 9 (to the second level data) are accessible resources, said links are still not automatically accessed, without requiring user input as claimed in claims 1, 23 and 26 of the present application.

Moreover, such an arrangement in Reilly does not provide interactively variable duration information, representing the duration that the content corresponding to the accessed resource is presented so as to enable a user to vary said duration as claimed in independent claims 1, 23 and 26.

For at least these reasons, Applicant requests the rejection of independent claims 1, 23

and 26 be withdrawn. As claims 2-15, 24-25 and 27-30 depend from claims 1, 23 and 26 respectively these claims should be allowed for at least the same reasons.

Separately, Applicant notes that the cited Reilly reference was cited in the prosecution of the parent U.S. Patent 7,155,451 which underwent extensive review and was subject to an Appeal before the Patent Board of Appeals and Interferences. In a Decision dated July 21, 2005, The cited Reilly reference, along with other references cited in prior Information Disclosure Statements in this application, including Hauck, Microsoft Press and Richardson (U.S. Patent No. 5,809,247) were reviewed and the claimed subject matter was found patentable. See the attached Decision as exhibit 1 after the appendix with corrected Figure 6.

Regarding independent claim 16, this claim is directed to a method for providing content via a communications network on a user's computer, obtained from a plurality of resources in an organized arrangement. The method includes receiving a request for an online search from a remote user and providing a plurality of search results and their corresponding resource locators in response to the request. A show structure of nodes is created based on the search results, each node identifying a resource from a plurality of accessible resources, at least some of which are network accessible resources.

The method includes, without requiring user input, automatically accessing a plurality of the network accessible resources identified by a corresponding node and causing content corresponding to each of the accessed resources to be automatically presented through the user's computer in accordance with the show structure. The method also includes causing advertisement content to be presented to the user in connection with the automatic presentation of the content through the user's computer.

In such an arrangement the method includes receiving a request for an online search from a remote user and providing a plurality of search results and their corresponding resource locators in response to the request. A show structure of nodes is created based on the search results. An example of such a feature is described in paragraph [0066] where a show structure of URLs is created in response to a search engine results list.

In forming the rejection, the Examiner relies primarily on Reilly as above regarding independent claims 1, 23 and 26, arguing that the show structure of Reilly is not created in response to an on-line search. The Examiner however asserts that Brown teaches creating a show based on an on-line search and that one of ordinary skill in the art could combine the feature of preparing a show based on an online search as per Brown with the show structure arrangement as described in Reilly to arrive at the present claim 16. See Office Action at 25. Applicants respectfully disagree.

The Brown reference does not create a playlist based on search results. Rather the Brown reference is directed to an advertising scheduler or queue for on-line advertisements. Among other elements, the Brown arrangement includes a queue builder (10) that in some manner stores a plurality of advertisements to be displayed to an on-line viewer, such as through a banner add. See e.g. Brown at col. 3, lines 27-62. According to the cited col. 4, lines 3-15 of Brown as well the subsequent paragraphs, as best understood, the arrangement maintains a relationship with customers who intend to have their advertisements displayed via the Brown arrangement.

As such, the Brown system selects contents based on subscriber profiles and other criteria to be presented to targeted subscribers. See Brown at col. 9, lines 34-54. Brown simply communicates with and collects advertisements for display to the end users (i.e. viewers) and then track such information for billing. See Brown at col. 6, lines 28-59.

However, nothing in the cited portions appears to suggest the Brown either one of employs a search or creates a playlist/show, based on search results. The Brown arrangement does not receive a request for an online search from a remote user nor does it create a show structure of nodes based on the search results. The Examiner acknowledges on page 24 of the Office Action that Reilly does not teach such a feature.

Even if Reilly and Brown were combined as suggested by the Examiner, the resulting arrangement would still not teach or suggest all of the elements of independent claim 16.

For at least this reason, Applicant requests the rejection of independent claim 16 be withdrawn. As claims 17-22 depend from claim 16, these claims should be allowed for at least the same reasons.

In view of the forgoing, Applicant respectfully submits that pending claims 1-30 are in condition for allowance, the earliest possible notice of which is earnestly solicited. If the Examiner feels that an interview would facilitate the prosecution of this Application she is invited to contact the undersigned at the number listed below.

Applicant expressly authorizes the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office to charge any necessary extension of time fees under 37 CFR 1.17(a)(1-5) required for the submission of this paper to prevent abandonment of this file, to be charged to deposit account # 19-2825, order number 735-002con3(1).

ON BRIEF

Before HAIRSTON, SAADAT, and MACDONALD, Administrative Patent Judges.

DECISION ON APPEAL

This is an appeal from the final rejection of claims 1 through 36 and 40 through 67.

The disclosed invention relates to a method and apparatus for automatically accessing information content from a plurality of resource websites, and for automatically displaying the information content on a user's computer without user input.

Claims 1 and 58 are illustrative of the claimed invention, and they read as follows:

1. A method for displaying on a user's computer, content derived from a plurality of resources in an organized arrangement comprising the steps of:

creating a show structure of nodes, each node identififlying a resource from a plurality of accessible resources;

without requiring user input, automatically accesing a plurality of said resources each of said resources identified by each of said nodes; and displaying a content corresponding to each of said resources automatically in accordance with said show structure, wherein said step of creating further comprises the step of providing an interactively variable duration information, representing the duration within which a corresponding content to said resource is being displayed so as to enable a user to vary said duration.

58. An automated content displayer which is used to sequentially present, to a remote user, information content derived from selected websites, comprising:

means for storing at least one list of websites, each website of said at least one list having a corresponding address and an amount of time for which information content from said website is to be displayed to said remote user;

means, for receiving from said remote user a selection of said list; means, responsive to said selection of said list, for automatically retrieving information content from the websites in said list, without a user input;

means, for automatically providing the retrieved information content to said remote user; means for caching and queuing content from subsequent websites within said list, while a content corresponding to a current website is being displayed; and a timer for controlling the duration that said information content is displayed to said user in accordance with the stored amount of time and for determining a time for retrieving information content corresponding to a next item in the list, wherein said duration that said information content is displayed is also interactively variable so as to enable a user to vary said duration.

OPINION

We have carefully considered the entire record before us, and we will reverse the obviousness rejections of claims 1 through 36 and 40 through 67.

Each of claims 1 through 36 and 40 through 57 retrieves and displays the contents of a plurality of resources automatically without user input. The examiner's primary reference to Hauck retrieves and displays the contents of a plurality of resources (e.g., hypertext nodes or WWW pages) (Figure 2.1), but the guided tour system in Hauck requires user input to move to the next node or to the previous node (Abstract; Section 2).

Stated differently, we agree with the appellant's argument (brief, page 19) that the guided tour through the nodes in Hauck is manually controlled by the user. Turning to the secondary references, neither the variable duration of a presentation teachings of Microsoft Press, the on-line search teachings of Richardson nor the user profile creation teachings of Reilly teaches or would have suggested to the skilled artisan the automatic retrieval and display of the contents of a plurality of resources automatically without user input as required by the noted claims on appeal. The teachings of Malec and Abecassis also lack such a teaching. Thus, the obviousness rejections of claims 1 through 36 and 40 through 57 are reversed.

Turning to the obviousness rejection of claim 58, and the claims that depend therefrom, we agree with the appellant's arguments (brief, pages 32 through 34) that neither Blonder nor Buchanan teaches or would have suggested to the skilled artisan means for caching and queuing content from subsequent websites while content from a current website is being displayed. Blonder, like Hauck, requires the user to manually select links during the structured tour of hypertext links (Abstract; column 5, lines 21 through 29; column 7, line 41 through column 8, line 1). If content from each website in Blonder is individually selected by the user, then Blonder does not have any content to either cache or queue before it is displayed as required by claim 58. The adjustable playback time of a document teachings of Buchanan do not cure this shortcoming in the teachings of Blonder. The same holds true for the user profile teachings of Gerace. Accordingly, the obviousness rejections of claims 58 through 67 are reversed.

DECISION

The decision of the examiner rejecting claims 1 through 36 and 40 through 67 under 35 U.S.C. § 103(a) is reversed.

> (a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negatived by the manner in which the invention was made.

8. Claims 1-10, 12, 13 and 23-30 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over US Patent No 5,740,549 to Reilly et al (hereafter Reilly) in view of US Patent No 5,751,672 to Yankowski (hereafter Yankowski).

Referring to claim 1, Reilly discloses a method for providing content via a communications network on a user's computer, obtained from a plurality of resources in an organized arrangement (see Fig 1 and column 3, line 66 – column 4, line 20) comprising the steps of:

creating a show structure of nodes [queues], each node identifying a resource from a plurality of accessible resources [linked lists so as to generate queues of news items and queues of advertisements] (see Figs 8 & 9 and column 12, line 6 – column 13, line 25), at least some of which are network accessible resources (see column 4, lines 8-14 and column 8, lines 19-35 – the content is retrieved via the Internet);

without requiring user input [an administration manager 180 schedules and controls all communications with the information server 104], automatically accessing a plurality of said network accessible resources identified by a corresponding node [The default connection schedule is for the subscriber's computer to initiate a connection to the information server once during the middle of the night for an "administrative update," and once every four hours during the rest of the day for “news story updates.” During the administrative update connection, the set of advertisements, scripts and images in the subscriber computer’s local information database are updated as necessary, and any software upgrades are also downloaded onto the subscriber’s computer … the profiler 206 can be used to specify a connection schedule other than the default schedule] (see column 6, lines 37-45 and column 8, lines 19-44);

causing content corresponding to each of said accessed resources to be automatically presented through said user's computer in accordance with said show structure [whenever the system detects a lack of user inputs via either keyboard or pointer device for a user configurable or otherwise specified length of time, the screen saver procedures of the present invention begin the display of news items and advertisements from the local information database] (see column 11, lines 40-63); and causing advertisement content to be presented to said user in connection with said automatic presentation of said content through said user's computer [Each advertisement is displayed on subscribers’ workstations simultaneously with news items assigned to the same category as the advertisement] (Reilly: see column 4, line 66 – column 5, line 4).

While Reilly discloses displaying content in a defined second interval such as 30 seconds in the examples (see column 10, lines 56-62 and column 11, lines 10-20), Reilly fails to explicitly disclose the further limitation of providing interactively variable duration information, representing the duration that said content corresponding to said resource is presented so as to enable a user to vary said duration. Yankowski discloses the creation of a playlist for playing content (see column 9, line 37 – column 10, line 3), including the further limitation of providing interactively variable duration information [Once the play list is assembled in this manner, the user can then initiate play of the list at 188. The control interface can be implemented as a character or graphical user interface as desired], representing the duration [track play time] that said content corresponding to said resource is presented so as to enable a user to vary said duration [there are many ways to represent these control functions in a user interface, for example, a menu bar can be provided with drop down menus or particular control icons can be provided; … the user can then initiate play of the list at 188. The control interface can be implemented as a character or graphical user interface as desired. In one embodiment, the interface can be designed in a manner similar to that of the Music Box window … and may include all conventional instructions … (including stop, play, pause, skip back, skip forward] (Yankowski: see column 9, lines 26-36 and column 10, lines 4-23).

It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention to allow the user to control the content of Reilly in the manner disclosed by Yankowski. One would have been motivated to do so in order to improve the user experience by allowing the user to have control over the manner in which the content is displayed.

Referring to claim 2, the combination of Reilly and Yankowski (hereafter Reilly/Yankowski) discloses the method as claimed in claim 1, wherein said advertisement content is dynamic content [Each advertisement is displayed on subscribers' workstations simultaneously with news items assigned to the same category as the advertisement] (Reilly: see column 4, line 66 – column 5, line 4 – the advertisements are construed by the examiner as being dynamic since the particular advertisement displayed depends on which news item is displayed).

Referring to claim 3, Reilly/Yankowski discloses the method as claimed in claim 1, wherein said advertisement content is a default set of advertisement content [the advertisements are either permanently embedded in the computer programs or reside permanently with computer programs] (Reilly: see column 1, line 66 – column 2, line 3 – since the advertisements are permanent and cannot be targeted, they are considered to be default).

Referring to claim 4, Reilly/Yankowski discloses the method as claimed in claim 1, wherein said show structure of nodes is interspersed with said advertisement content [in other embodiments advertisements and news items could be displayed sequentially] (Reilly: see column 11, lines 30-37).

Referring to claim 5, Reilly/Yankowski discloses the method as claimed in claim 1, wherein said advertisement, content is presented in a persistent content window [advertisements are always simultaneously displayed with news items] (Reilly: see Fig 6, column 9, line 65 - column 10, line 9 – at least item 232 is considered to represent a persistent window).

Referring to claim 6, Reilly/Yankowski discloses the method as claimed in claim 1, wherein said advertisement content is presented using a node in said show structure of nodes [linked lists so as to generate queues of news items and queues of advertisements] (Reilly: see Figs 8 & 9 and column 12, line 6 – column 13, line 25).

Referring to claim 7, Reilly/Yankowski discloses the method in accordance with claim 1, wherein said advertisement content is presented using a URL [“clicking" on the advertisement to connect to the advertiser’s World Wide Web page] (Reilly: see column 6, lines 4-10).

Referring to claim 8, Reilly/Yankowski discloses the method with accordance with claim 1, further comprising the step of providing said advertisement content in accordance with a user's profile [Each advertisement is displayed on subscribers’ workstations simultaneously with news items assigned to the same category as the advertisement] (Reilly: see column 4, line 66 – column 5, line 4 and column 9, lines 37-62 – The news articles are targeted to a user based on a user profile. Since the chosen advertisements are directly correlated to the news items, the advertisements are also construed by the examiner as being dependent on the user profile).

Referring to claim 9, Reilly/Yankowski discloses the method in accordance with claim 1, wherein said advertisement content is a resource accessible via the Internet [if the user clicks on the displayed advertisement, the subscriber’s computer is automatically connected to the an associated World Wide Web page on the Internet that provides additional information from the advertiser] (Reilly: see column 14, lines 7-11).

Referring to claim 10, Reilly/Yankowski discloses the method in accordance with claim 1, wherein said advertisement content is a resource accessible via an Internet website [if the user clicks on the displayed advertisement, the subscriber’s computer is automatically connected to the an associated World Wide Web page on the Internet that provides additional information from the advertiser] (Reilly: see column 14, lines 7-11).

Referring to claim 12, Reilly/Yankowski discloses the method in accordance with claim 1, wherein said advertisement content is displayable content [the downloading of advertisements (which are typically images)] (Reilly: see column 8, lines 45-46 – images are construed by the examiner as representing displayable content).

Referring to claim 13, Reilly/Yankowski discloses the method in accordance with claim 1, further comprising the step of altering the show structure in response to user action related to said advertisement content (see column 5, line 61 – column 6, line 10 and Table 1).

Referring to claim 23, Reilly discloses a method for providing content via a communications network on a user's computer, obtained from a plurality of resources in an organized arrangement (see Fig 1 and column 3, line 66 – column 4, line 20) comprising the steps of:

creating a show structure of nodes [queues], each node identifying a resource from a plurality of accessible resources [linked lists so as to generate queues of news items and queues of advertisements] (see Figs 8 & 9 and column 12, line 6 – column 13, line 25), at least some of which are network accessible resources (see column 4, lines 8-14 and column 8, lines 19-35 – the content is retrieved via the Internet);

without requiring user input [an administration manager 180 schedules and controls all communications with the information server 104], automatically accessing a plurality of said network accessible resources identified by a corresponding node [The default connection schedule is for the subscriber's computer to initiate a connection to the information server once during the middle of the night for an "administrative update," and once every four hours during the rest of the day for "news story updates." During the administrative update connection, the set of advertisements, scripts and images in the subscriber computer's local information database are updated as necessary, and any software upgrades are also downloaded onto the subscriber's computer … the profiler 206 can be used to specify a connection schedule other than the default schedule] (see column 6, lines 37-45 and column 8, lines 19-44);

causing content corresponding to each of said accessed resources to be automatically presented through said user's computer in accordance with said show structure [whenever the system detects a lack of user inputs via either keyboard or pointer device for a user configurable or otherwise specified length of time, the screen saver procedures of the present invention begin the display of news items and advertisements from the local information database] (see column 11, lines 40-63); and causing advertisement content to be presented to said user in a persistent content window [advertisements are always simultaneously displayed with news items] (see Fig 6, column 9, line 65 - column 10, line 9 – at least item 232 is considered to represent a persistent window) in connection with said automatic presentation of said content through said user's computer [Each advertisement is displayed on subscribers' workstations simultaneously with news items assigned to the same category as the advertisement] (see column 4, line 66 – column 5, line 4).

While Reilly discloses displaying content in a defined second interval such as 30 seconds in the examples (see column 10, lines 56-62 and column 11, lines 10-20), Reilly fails to explicitly disclose the further limitation of providing interactively variable duration information, representing the duration that said content corresponding to said resource is presented so as to enable a user to vary said duration. Yankowski discloses the creation of a playlist for playing content (see column 9, line 37 – column 10, line 3), including the further limitation of providing interactively variable duration information [Once the play list is assembled in this manner, the user can then initiate play of the list at 188. The control interface can be implemented as a character or graphical user interface as desired], representing the duration [track play time] that said content corresponding to said resource is presented so as to enable a user to vary said duration [there are many ways to represent these control functions in a user interface, for example, a menu bar can be provided with drop down menus or particular control icons can be provided; … the user can then initiate play of the list at 188. The control interface can be implemented as a character or graphical user interface as desired. In one embodiment, the interface can be designed in a manner similar to that of the Music Box window … and may include all conventional instructions … (including stop, play, pause, skip back, skip forward] (Yankowski: see column 9, lines 26-36 and column 10, lines 4-23).

It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention to allow the user to control the content of Reilly in the manner disclosed by Yankowski. One would have been motivated to do so in order to improve the user experience by allowing the user to have control over the manner in which the content is displayed.

Referring to claim 24, Reilly/Yankowski discloses the method as claimed in claim 23, wherein said content corresponding to each of said accessed resources is displayed through said user's computer and wherein said persistent content window is a separate window from said displayed content (Reilly: see Fig 6, column 9, line 65 - column 10, line 9 – at least item 232 is considered to represent an advertisement persistent window and items 230a-c are considered to represent the accessed resources).

Referring to claim 25, Reilly/Yankowski discloses the method as claimed in claim 23, wherein said persistent content window is displayed simultaneously with said displayed content presented through said user's computer [advertisements are always simultaneously displayed with news items] (Reilly: see Fig 6, column 9, line 65 - column 10, line 9).

Referring to claim 26, Reilly discloses a method for providing content via a communications network on a user's computer, obtained from a plurality of resources in an organized arrangement (see Fig 1 and column 3, line 66 – column 4, line 20) comprising the steps of:

creating a show structure of nodes [queues], each node identifying a resource from a plurality of accessible resources [linked lists so as to generate queues of news items and queues of advertisements] (see Figs 8 & 9 and column 12, line 6 – column

13, line 25), at least some of which are network accessible resources (see column 4, lines 8-14 and column 8, lines 19-35 – the content is retrieved via the Internet);

without requiring user input [an administration manager 180 schedules and controls all communications with the information server 104], automatically accessing a plurality of said network accessible resources identified by a corresponding node [The default connection schedule is for the subscriber's computer to initiate a connection to the information server once during the middle of the night for an "administrative update," and once every four hours during the rest of the day for "news story updates." During the administrative update connection, the set of advertisements, scripts and images in the subscriber computer's local information database are updated as necessary, and any software upgrades are also downloaded onto the subscriber's computer … the profiler 206 can be used to specify a connection schedule other than the default schedule] (see column 6, lines 37-45 and column 8, lines 19-44);

causing content corresponding to each of said accessed resources to be automatically presented through said user's computer in accordance with said show structure [whenever the system detects a lack of user inputs via either keyboard or pointer device for a user configurable or otherwise specified length of time, the screen saver procedures of the present invention begin the display of news items and advertisements from the local information database] (see column 11, lines 40-63); and

causing targeted advertisement content to be presented to said user in connection with said automatic presentation of said content through said user's computer [Each advertisement is displayed on subscribers' workstations simultaneously with news items assigned to the same category as the advertisement] (Reilly: see column 4, line 66 – column 5, line 4 and column 9, lines 37-62 – The news articles are targeted to a user based on a user profile. Since the chosen advertisements are directly correlated to the news items, the advertisements are also construed by the examiner as being dependent on the user profile).

While Reilly discloses displaying content in a defined second interval such as 30 seconds in the examples (see column 10, lines 56-62 and column 11, lines 10-20), Reilly fails to explicitly disclose the further limitation of providing interactively variable duration information, representing the duration that said content corresponding to said resource is presented so as to enable a user to vary said duration. Yankowski discloses the creation of a playlist for playing content (see column 9, line 37 – column 10, line 3), including the further limitation of providing interactively variable duration information [Once the play list is assembled in this manner, the user can then initiate play of the list at 188. The control interface can be implemented as a character or graphical user interface as desired], representing the duration [track play time] that said content corresponding to said resource is presented so as to enable a user to vary said duration [there are many ways to represent these control functions in a user interface, for example, a menu bar can be provided with drop down menus or particular control icons can be provided; … the user can then initiate play of the list at 188. The control interface can be implemented as a character or graphical user interface as desired. In one embodiment, the interface can be designed in a manner similar to that of the Music Box window … and may include all conventional instructions … (including stop, play, pause, skip back, skip forward] (Yankowski: see column 9, lines 26-36 and column 10, lines 4-23).

It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention to allow the user to control the content of Reilly in the manner disclosed by Yankowski. One would have been motivated to do so in order to improve the user experience by allowing the user to have control over the manner in which the content is displayed.

Referring to claim 27, Reilly/Yankowski discloses the method as claimed in claim 26, wherein said targeted advertisement content is based on a user profile [Each advertisement is displayed on subscribers' workstations simultaneously with news items assigned to the same category as the advertisement] (Reilly: see column 4, line 66 – column 5, line 4 and column 9, lines 37-62 – The news articles are targeted to a user based on a user profile. Since the chosen advertisements are directly correlated to the news items, the advertisements are also construed by the examiner as being dependent on the user profile).

Referring to claim 28, Reilly/Yankowski discloses a method as claimed in claim 27, wherein said profile includes past actions taken by said user (Reilly: see column 9, lines 18-33).

Referring to claim 29, Reilly/Yankowski discloses a method as claimed in claim 28, wherein said targeting of said advertisement content is based on past skipping actions taken by said user on previously presented advertisement content, stored in said user profile (Reilly: see column 9, lines 11-33 and column 14, lines 7-11).

Referring to claim 30, Reilly/Yankowski discloses a method as claimed in claim 26, wherein targeted advertisement content is selected based on said content in said show structure of nodes [Each advertisement is displayed on subscribers' workstations simultaneously with news items assigned to the same category as the advertisement] (Reilly: see column 4, line 66 – column 5, line 4).

9. Claim 11 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over US Patent No 5,740,549 to Reilly et al in view of US Patent No 5,751,672 to Yankowski as applied to claim 1 above, and further in view of US Patent No 5,668,788 to Allison (hereafter Allison).

Referring to claim 11, while Reilly/Yankowski discloses the presentation of advertisements, Reilly/Yankowski fails to explicitly disclose the further limitation wherein said advertisement content is video content. Allison discloses the playing of content and advertisements for a user, including the further limitation wherein said advertisement content is video content [video materials such as advertisements … may be economically incorporated into the system] (see column 3, lines 8-13).

It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention to have the data type of the advertisement disclosed by Reilly/Yankowski be a video type in the manner disclosed by Allison. One would have been motivated to do so since the format type is merely a design choice and the concept of video enhances value by sparking user interest in the content.

10. Claim 14 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over US Patent No 5,740,549 to Reilly et al in view of US Patent No 5,751,672 to Yankowski as applied to claim 1 above, and further in view of the background of US Patent No 6,769,009 to Reisman (hereafter Reisman).

Referring to claim 14, while Reilly/Yankowski discloses the presentation of content on a user computer, Reilly/Yankowski fails to explicitly state that the computer is a mobile device. Reisman discloses the distribution of information to a plurality of user stations, including the further limitation wherein said computer is a mobile device [PDA] (see column 1, line 63 – column 2, line 8).

It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention to utilize a PDA as the computer of Reilly/Yankowski. One would have been motivated to do so since Reilly states that the computer can be any type of computer (Reilly: see column 4, lines 16-20).

11. Claim 15 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over US Patent No 5,740,549 to Reilly et al in view of US Patent No 5,751,672 to Yankowski as applied to claim 1 above, and further in view of US Patent No 6,769,009 to Reisman (hereafter Reisman).

Referring to claim 15, while Reilly/Yankowski discloses the presentation of content using the Internet, Reilly/Yankowski fails to explicitly state the further limitation wherein said content is presented through said user's computer using a web browser. Reisman discloses the distribution of information to a plurality of user stations each configured for communications with a multiplicity of servers via a non-proprietary network (see abstract), including the further limitation wherein said content is presented through said user's computer using a web browser [at least one web browser at least one of said user stations to retrieve and view information objects] (see column 36, lines 18-22).

It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to display the content of Reilly/Yankowski utilizing a web browser in the manner disclosed by Reisman. One would have been motivated to do so since it is well known in the art at the time of the invention that a web browser is a mechanism which provides standard graphical user interface and data presentation functions to allow for web pages to be accessed and viewed.

12. Claims 16-18 and 22 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over US Patent No 5,740,549 to Reilly et al in view of US Patent No 6,026,368 to Brown et al (hereafter Brown).

Referring to claim 16, Reilly discloses a method for providing content via a communications network on a user's computer, obtained from a plurality of resources in an organized arrangement (see Fig 1 and column 3, line 66 – column 4, line 20) comprising the steps of:

creating a show structure of nodes [queues], each node identifying a resource from a plurality of accessible resources [linked lists so as to generate queues of news items and queues of advertisements] (see Figs 8 & 9 and column 12, line 6 – column

13, line 25), at least some of which are network accessible resources (see column 4, lines 8-14 and column 8, lines 19-35 – the content is retrieved via the Internet);

without requiring user input [an administration manager 180 schedules and controls all communications with the information server 104], automatically accessing a plurality of said network accessible resources identified by a corresponding node [The default connection schedule is for the subscriber's computer to initiate a connection to the information server once during the middle of the night for an "administrative update," and once every four hours during the rest of the day for "news story updates." During the administrative update connection, the set of advertisements, scripts and images in the subscriber computer's local information database are updated as necessary, and any software upgrades are also downloaded onto the subscriber's computer … the profiler 206 can be used to specify a connection schedule other than the default schedule] (see column 6, lines 37-45 and column 8, lines 19-44);

causing content corresponding to each of said accessed resources to be automatically presented through said user's computer in accordance with said show structure [whenever the system detects a lack of user inputs via either keyboard or pointer device for a user configurable or otherwise specified length of time, the screen saver procedures of the present invention begin the display of news items and advertisements from the local information database] (see column 11, lines 40-63); and

causing advertisement content to be presented to said user in connection with said automatic presentation of said content through said user's computer [Each advertisement is displayed on subscribers' workstations simultaneously with news items

assigned to the same category as the advertisement] (Reilly: see column 4, line 66 – column 5, line 4).

While Reilly discloses the creation of the structure of nodes, Reilly fails to explicitly disclose the further limitations of receiving a request for an online search from a remote user; providing a plurality of search results and their corresponding resource locators in response to said request, and creating the show structure of nodes based on said search result. Brown discloses receiving a request for an online search from a remote user [Through a set of standard function calls that are imbedded in the applications of the communications service, these applications send requests for content segment play lists to the on-line queue manager 20. The requests identify the current subscriber ...] (see Fig 1 and column 4, lines 3-15); providing a plurality of search results [The on-line queue manager 20 returns a play list of content segments] and their corresponding resource locators [content location] in response to said request (see column 3, lines 28-62; column 4, lines 3-15; and column 6, lines 28-42), and creating the show structure of nodes based on said search result [playlist] (see column 3, lines 28-62; column 4, lines 3-15; and column 6, lines 28-42).

It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention to utilize the process of creating a playlist as disclosed by Brown as the way in which to schedule the content of Reilly. One would have been motivated to do so in order to allow for the user to have explicit control of the content that is presented to them.

Referring to claim 17, the combination of Reilly and Brown (hereafter Reilly/Brown) discloses the method in accordance with claim 16, wherein said user request comprises a search of accessible Internet content [content in a computer mediated communication network] (Brown: see column 3, lines 23-26).

Referring to claim 18, Reilly/Brown discloses the method in accordance with claim 16, wherein said user request comprises a search of a web site [content in a computer mediated communication network] (Brown: see column 3, lines 23-26).

Referring to claim 22, Reilly/Brown discloses the method in accordance with claim 16, wherein the step of causing the presentation of said retrieved content automatically in accordance with said show structure includes the presentation of content from at least two nodes presented simultaneously [advertisements are always simultaneously displayed with news items] (Reilly: see Fig 6, column 9, line 65 - column 10, line 9).

13. Claims 20 and 21 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over US Patent No 5,740,549 to Reilly et al in view of US Patent No 6,026,368 to Brown et al as applied to claim 16 above and further in view of US Patent No 5,751,672 to Yankowski (hereafter Yankowski).

Referring to claim 20, Reilly/Brown fails to explicitly disclose the further limitation wherein said show structure is presented to said user. Yankowski discloses allowing a user to search for content and build a playlist (see column 9, line 37 – column 10, line 3), including the further limitation wherein said show structure is presented to said user [playlist] (see column 10, lines 24-63).

It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention to present the schedule/playlist of Reilly/Brown to the user in the manner disclosed by Yankowski. One would have been motivated to do so in order to allow the user to interact with the playlist to increase user control over the content displayed.

Referring to claim 21, the combination of Reilly/Brown and Yankowski discloses the method in accordance with claim 20, wherein said show structure is presented to said user while said content is being delivered (Yankowski: see column 10, lines 24-63).

Response to Arguments

14. Applicant's arguments filed on page 14 of the Remarks, with respect to the objections to the Specification have been fully considered and are persuasive. The objections of Specification have been withdrawn.

15. Applicant's arguments filed on pages 14-15 of the Remarks, with respect to the double patenting rejections have been withdrawn as necessitated by the filing of the terminal disclaimers.

16. Applicant's arguments filed on pages 15-21 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive.

Referring to Applicant's arguments on page 18 of the Remarks, the Applicant argues the following:

The Examiner has pointed out in the Office Action at pg. 12 that in Figures 8 and 9 of Reilly, each entry in the queue includes a link to a second level or more detailed data that is not transmitted with the script, but is only accessible via the internet when the subscriber exits the script presentation and actively clicks the link to the second level data. See for example Reilly at col. 4, lines 50-65 describing the split data structure. See Reilly at col. 12, line 57 to col. 13, line 6 regarding the requirement of the user to actively exit the show and click through a link to access additional data.

The examiner respectfully disagrees. The examiner stated in the rejection, Reilly teaches creating a show structure of nodes [queues], each node identifying a resource from a plurality of accessible resources [linked lists so as to generate queues of news items and queues of advertisements] (see Figs 8 & 9 and column 12, line 6 – column 13, line 25). The examiner did not point out that each entry in the queue includes a link to a second level or more detailed data that is not transmitted with the script, but is only accessible via the internet when the subscriber exits the script presentation and actively clicks the link to the second level data as is stated by the Applicant in the argument. As is stated in column 12, lines 6-14, "... the advertisements assigned to each information category are organized, through the use of a set of data access tables 186, in a separate linked list so as to create a separate “queue” of advertisements for each information category. Similarly, the news items and display scripts assigned to each information category are organized in separate linked lists so as to create separate queues of news items and display scripts for each information category." The linked lists are the queues of news stories and advertisements. The Applicant points to column 4, lines 50-56, stating that this section describes splitting the data. The section pointed out by the Applicant merely points out that the body of a news story can be divided into two portions: a primary portion and a secondary portion. The primary portion can include a headline with a portion of the text and the secondary portion can included the rest of the information. The linked lists of queues link together the display of the news stories and the advertisements so that news stories from different categories can be continuously displayed. Also, the advertisements can then be simultaneously or concurrently displayed with the stories. The exit mode and the split structure of the news story allows a user to obtain additional information if they so wish. However, inclusion of a split structure and the option to retrieve additional information does not mean that Reilly fails to teach the limitation of creating a show structure of nodes, each node identifying a resource from a plurality of accessible resources. Furthermore, according to column 4, lines 8-14 and column 8, lines 19-35 of Reilly, the content is retrieved from the information server via the Internet. Therefore, the news stories and advertisements represented by the queues are construed by the examiner as representing accessible resources.

The Applicant further argues the following:

Such an arrangement in Reilly does not, without requiring user input, automatically accesses a plurality of the network accessible resources identified by a corresponding node and causing content corresponding to each of the accessed resources to be automatically presented through the user's computer in accordance with the show structure. Even assuming arguendo that tile Examiner's position on page 12 of the Office Action is correct that the links from Figures 8 and 9 (to the second level data) are accessible resources, said links are still not automatically accessed, without requiring user input as claimed in claims 1, 23 and 26 of the present application.

The examiner respectfully disagrees. Reilly teaches without requiring user input [an administration manager 180 schedules and controls all communications with the information server 104], automatically accessing a plurality of said network accessible resources identified by a corresponding node [The default connection schedule is for the subscriber's computer to initiate a connection to the information server once during the middle of the night for an "administrative update," and once every four hours during the rest of the day for "news story updates." During the administrative update connection, the set of advertisements, scripts and images in the subscriber computer's local information database are updated as necessary, and any software upgrades are also downloaded onto the subscriber's computer … the profiler 206 can be used to specify a connection schedule other than the default schedule] (see column 6, lines 37-45 and column 8, lines 19-44); and causing content corresponding to each of said accessed resources to be automatically presented through said user's computer in accordance with said show structure [whenever the system detects a lack of user inputs via either keyboard or pointer device for a user configurable or otherwise specified length of time, the screen saver procedures of the present invention begin the display of news items and advertisements from the local information database] (see column 11, lines 40-63). The Applicant does not provide reasoning for Reilly fails to teach the limitations. In the sections pointed out in the rejection, an administration manager 180 schedules and controls all communications with the information server 104. Since the administration manager is the one controlling the access, the examiner construes this to be without user input. Reilly further teaches that "The default connection schedule is for the subscriber's computer to initiate a connection to the information server once during the middle of the night for an "administrative update," and once every four hours during the rest of the day for "news story updates." During the administrative update connection, the set of advertisements, scripts and images in the subscriber computer's local information database are updated as necessary, and any software upgrades are also downloaded onto the subscriber's computer … the profiler 206 can be used to specify a connection schedule other than the default schedule." Therefore, for the reasons stated above, the examiner construes that the content/resources of Reilly are accessed without requiring user input.

Furthermore, with regards to the limitation "causing content corresponding to each of said accessed resources to be automatically presented through said user's computer in accordance with said show structure," Reilly teaches in column 11, lines 40-63 that whenever the system detects a lack of user inputs via either keyboard or pointer device for a user configurable or otherwise specified length of time, the screen saver procedures of the present invention begin the display of news items and advertisements from the local information database. The examiner construes the concept of when detecting a lack of user input, displaying content as being analogous to the feature of automatically displaying content.

Referring to Applicant's argument on page 18 of the Amendment in regards to the newly added limitation of the interactively variable duration information, a new reference has been added to the rejection in order to teach the new limitation.

Referring to Applicant's Argument on page 19 of the Remarks, the Applicant argues the following:

> Separately, Applicant notes that the cited Reilly reference was cited in the prosecution of the parent U.S. Patent 7,155,451 which underwent extensive review and was subject to an Appeal before the Patent Board of Appeals and Interferences. In a Decision dated July 21, 2005, The cited Reilly reference, along with other references cited in prior Information Disclosure Statements in this application, including Hauck, Microsoft Press and Richardson (U.S. Patent No. 5,809,247} were reviewed and the claimed subject matter was found patentable. See the attached Decision as exhibit 1 after the appendix with corrected Figure 6.

The examiner has carefully reviewed the rejection of the application associated with US Patent 7,155,451 and the decision. It is noted that Hauck and Microsoft were utilized to reject the limitations. The examiner has utilized Reilly, not Hauck to teach the limitations. In the rejection of the application associated with US Patent 7,155,451, Reilly was utilized to teach a dependent limitation dealing with a profile. The decision states that the user profile creation of Reilly fails to teach the automatic accessing and display. The examiner is not utilizing the profile creation of Reilly to teach the limitations, therefore, the decision is considered to be irrelevant to the current rejection.

Referring to Applicant's arguments on pages 20 and 21 of the Remarks, the Applicant argues:

> The Brown reference does not create a playlist based on search results. Rather the Brown reference is directed to an advertising scheduler or queue for online advertisements. Among other elements, the Brown arrangement includes a queue builder (10) that in some manner stores a plurality of advertisements to be displayed to an on-line viewer, such as through a banner add. See e.g. Brown at col. 3, dines 27-62. According to the cited col. 4, lines 3-15 of Brown as well the subsequent paragraphs, as best understood, the arrangement maintains a relationship with customers who intend to have their advertisements displayed via the Brown arrangement. As such, the Brown system selects contents based on subscriber profiles and other criteria to be presented to targeted subscribers. See Brown at col. 9, lines 34-54. Brown simply communicates with and collects advertisements for display, to the end users (i.e. viewers) and then track such information for billing See Brown at col. 6, lines 28-59.

The examiner respectfully disagrees that Brown fails to teach the claimed limitations. Brown is directed towards providing targeted content. In Fig 1 and column 4, lines 3-15, Brown discloses receiving a request for an online search from a remote user [Through a set of standard function calls that are imbedded in the applications of the communications service, these applications send requests for content segment play lists to the on-line queue manager 20. The requests identify the current subscriber ...]. The current subscriber is construed by the examiner as representing the remote user. The requests are to obtain content and consist of the identity of the current subscriber, the content location of the request, the data and time of the request, and the type of content record. Since the requests are sent in order to obtain content matching the parameters, the requests are construed by the examiner as representing a search. The requests are sent through a communications network and therefore the requests are construed by the examiner as being online. In column 3, lines 28-62; column 4, lines 3-15; and column 6, lines 28-42, Brown teaches providing a plurality of search results [The on-line queue manager 20 returns a play list of content segments] and their corresponding resource locators [content location] in response to said request. Since the requests are sent in order to obtain content matching the parameters, the requests are construed by the examiner as representing a search. The playlist is construed by the examiner as representing the results of the content that match the search parameters. In column 3, lines 28-62; column 4, lines 3-15; and column 6, lines 28-42, Brown depicts the playlist of content which is construed by the examiner as representing the show structure of nodes. Therefore, given the broadest reasonable interpretation of the claimed limitations, Brown is considered to teach the claimed limitations.

Conclusion

17. Applicant's amendment necessitated the new ground(s) of rejection presented in this Office action. Accordingly, THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. See MPEP § 706.07(a). Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the date of this final action.

Instruction Sheet for RCEs

(not to be submitted to the USPTO)

NOTES:

An RCE is not a new application, and filing an RCE will not result in an application being accorded a new filing date.

Filing Qualifications:

The application must be a utility or plant application filed on or after June 8, 1995. The application cannot be a provisional application, a utility or plant application filed before June 8, 1995, a design application, or a patent under reexamination. See 37 CFR 1.114(e).

Filing Requirements:

Prosecution in the application must be closed. Prosecution is closed if the application is under appeal, or the last Office action is a final action, a notice of allowance, or an action that otherwise closes prosecution in the application (e.g., an Office action under Ex parte Quayle). See 37 CFR 1.114(b).

A submission and a fee are required at the time the RCE is filed. If reply to an Office action under 35 U.S.C. 132 is outstanding (e.g., the application is under final rejection), the submission must meet the reply requirements of 37 CFR 1.111. If there is no outstanding Office action, the submission can be an information disclosure statement, an amendment, new arguments, or new evidence. See 37 CFR 1.114(c). The submission may be a previously filed amendment (e.g., an amendment after final rejection).

WARNINGS:

Request for Suspension of Action:

All RCE filing requirements must be met before suspension of action is granted. A request for a suspension of action under 37 CFR 1.103(c) does not satisfy the submission requirement and does not permit the filing of the required submission to be suspended.

Improper RCE will NOT toll Any Time Period:

Before Appeal - If the RCE is improper (e.g., prosecution in the application is not closed or the submission or fee has not been filed) and the application is not under appeal, the time period set forth in the last Office action will continue to run and the application will be abandoned after the statutory time period has expired if a reply to the Office action is not timely filed. No additional time will be given to correct the improper RCE.

Under Appeal - If the RCE is improper (e.g., the submission or the fee has not been filed) and the application is under appeal, the improper RCE is effective to withdraw the appeal. Withdrawal of the appeal results in the allowance or abandonment of the application depending on the status of the claims. If there are no allowed claims, the application is abandoned. If there is at least one allowed claim, the application will be passed to issue on the allowed claim(s). See MPEP 1215.01.

See MPEP 706.07(h) for further information on the RCE practice.

Remarks

Claims 1-30 are pending.

Claims 1-30 stand rejected.

Claims 1, 16, 23 and 26 are amended.

Claims 1-30 are submitted herein for review.

No new matter has been added.

Applicant begins by thanking the Examiner for the in-office interview conducted on Thursday March 21st.

In the Office Action, the Examiner rejected independent claims 1, 23 and 26 under 35 U.S.C. § 103(a) as being unpatentable over U.S. Patent No. 5,740,549 to Reilly in view of U.S. Patent No. 5,751,672 to Yankowski. (Office Action at pg. 3). Separately, independent claim 16 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. § 103(a) as being unpatentable over U.S. Patent No. 5,740,549 to Reilly in view of U.S. Patent No. 6,026,368 to Brown.

During the interview, the undersigned proposed to the Examiner the clarifying language as presented in this Amendment. The Examiner agreed that the Amendment overcame the rejection as cited in the Office Action.

Applicant submits the following remarks in furtherance of the response.

The present arrangement as claimed in claim 1 is directed to a method for providing content via a communications network on a user's computer, obtained from a plurality of resources in an organized arrangement. The method includes creating a show structure of nodes, each node identifying a resource from a plurality of accessible resources, at least some of which are network accessible resources. Without requiring user input, a plurality of the network accessible resources identified by a corresponding node are automatically accessed.

The method includes causing content corresponding to each of the accessed resources to be automatically accessed and presented through the user's computer in accordance with the show structure such that during the presentation of at least some of the content from the accessed resources, at least some of the other network accessible resources are being accessed.

The step of creating further comprises the step of providing interactively variable duration information, representing the duration that the content corresponding to the accessed resource is presented so as to enable a user to vary the duration and causing advertisement content to be presented to the user in connection with the automatic presentation of the content through the user's computer.

Applicant notes that each of the remaining independent method claims 16, 23 and 26 each include the feature causing content corresponding to each of the accessed resources to be automatically accessed and presented through the user's computer in accordance with the show structure such that during the presentation of at least some of the content from the accessed resources, at least some of the other network accessible resources are being accessed.

Prior to the above amendment, Examiner cited to col. 11, 40-63 of Reilly in support of the rejection of this element. See present Office Action at pgs. 4 (claim 1), 9 (claim 23), 12 (claim 26), and 18 (claim 16).

As noted in the prior Amendment of December 2012, the cited Reilly reference relates to an information and advertising distribution system that essentially displays information and advertisements to a subscriber computer when the subscriber's computer is idle (screen saver mode) for a certain predefined amount of time. See e.g. Reilly at col. 2, lines 28-34. The scripts and the associated content are delivered periodically to a subscriber's computer to be displayed at a later time according to the instructions stored in the script.

As soon as the Reilly system detects a movement of the mouse or other user input device (e.g. any key on keypad), the Reilly screen saver is exited. See Reilly, at col. 12, line 57 to col. 13, line 8 - In a first mode, the Reilly system exits the screen saver procedure immediately upon detection of any user action. In a second mode the screen saver mode is exited by pressing a key on the keypad. In the second mode, the user may move the mouse without instantly exiting, but if the user clicks on news item, then the termination/exit is completed and the user is directed from the headline data to the more detailed version of the news story. In Reilly, even though there are two types of exit modes from the screen saver all of the exit modes, exit the screen saver upon any user attempt to interact over and above a simple mouse movement.

As discussed at the interview, and agreed to by the Examiner, such an arrangement in Reilly does not cause content corresponding to each of the accessed resources to be automatically accessed and presented through the user's computer in accordance with the show structure such that during the presentation of at least some of the content from the accessed resources, at least some of the other network accessible resources are being accessed.

For at least this reason, Applicant requests the rejection of independent claims 1, 16, 23 and 26 be withdrawn. As claims 2-15, 17-22, 24-25 and 27-30 depend from claims 1, 16, 23 and 26 respectively these claims should be allowed for at least the same reasons.

In view of the forgoing, Applicant respectfully submits that pending claims 1-30 are in condition for allowance, the earliest possible notice of which is earnestly solicited. If the Examiner feels that an interview would facilitate the prosecution of this Application she is invited to contact the undersigned at the number listed below.

Applicant expressly authorizes the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office to charge any necessary extension of time fees under 37 CFR 1.17(a)(1-5) required for the submission of this paper to prevent abandonment of this file, to be charged to deposit account # 19-2825, order number 735-002con3(1).

An RCE is not a new application, and filing an RCE will not result in an application being accorded a new filing date.

Filing Qualifications:

The application must be a utility or plant application filed on or after June 8, 1995. The application cannot be a provisional application, a utility or plant application filed before June 8, 1995, a design application, or a patent under reexamination. See 37 CFR 1.114(e).

Filing Requirements:

Prosecution in the application must be closed. Prosecution is closed if the application is under appeal, or the last Office action is a final action, a notice of allowance, or an action that otherwise closes prosecution in the application (e.g., an Office action under Ex parte Quayle). See 37 CFR 1.114(b).

A submission and a fee are required at the time the RCE is filed. If reply to an Office action under 35 U.S.C. 132 is outstanding (e.g., the application is under final rejection), the submission must meet the reply requirements of 37 CFR 1.111. If there is no outstanding Office action, the submission can be an information disclosure statement, an amendment, new arguments, or new evidence. See 37 CFR 1.114(c). The submission may be a previously filed amendment (e.g., an amendment after final rejection).

WARNINGS:

Request for Suspension of Action:

All RCE filing requirements must be met before suspension of action is granted. A request for a suspension of action under 37 CFR 1.103(c) does not satisfy the submission requirement and does not permit the filing of the required submission to be suspended.

Improper RCE will NOT toll Any Time Period:

Before Appeal - If the RCE is improper (e.g., prosecution in the application is not closed or the submission or fee has not been filed) and the application is not under appeal, the time period set forth in the last Office action will continue to run and the application will be abandoned after the statutory time period has expired if a reply to the Office action is not timely filed. No additional time will be given to correct the improper RCE.

Under Appeal - If the RCE is improper (e.g., the submission or the fee has not been filed) and the application is under appeal, the improper RCE is effective to withdraw the appeal. Withdrawal of the appeal results in the allowance or abandonment of the application depending on the status of the claims. If there are no allowed claims, the application is abandoned. If there is at least one allowed claim, the application will be passed to issue on the allowed claim(s). See MPEP 1215.01.

See MPEP 706.07(h) for further information on the RCE practice.

(For each issue discussed, provide a detailed description and indicate if agreement was reached. Some topics may include: identification or clarification of a reference or a portion thereof, claim interpretation, proposed amendments, arguments of any applied references etc...)

An overview of the invention was given. Afterwards it was discussed how the invention was different from the prior art of record. The main difference discussed was that the invention retrieves content while the content is being presented.

Applicant recordation instructions: The formal written reply to the last Office action must include the substance of the interview. (See MPEP section 713.04). If a reply to the last Office action has already been filed, applicant is given a non-extendable period of the longer of one month or thirty days from this interview date, or the mailing date of this interview summary form, whichever is later, to file a statement of the substance of the interview

Examiner recordation instructions: Examiners must summarize the substance of any interview of record. A complete and proper recordation of the substance of an interview should include the items listed in MPEP 713.04 for complete and proper recordation including the identification of the general thrust of each argument or issue discussed, a general indication of any other pertinent matters discussed regarding patentability and the general results or outcome of the interview, to include an indication as to whether or not agreement was reached on the issues raised.

Summary of Record of Interview Requirements

Manual of Patent Examining Procedure (MPEP), Section 713.04, Substance of Interview Must be Made of Record
A complete written statement as to the substance of any face-to-face, video conference, or telephone interview with regard to an application must be made of record in the application whether or not an agreement with the examiner was reached at the interview.

Title 37 Code of Federal Regulations (CFR) § 1.133 Interviews
Paragraph (b)

In every instance where reconsideration is requested in view of an interview with an examiner, a complete written statement of the reasons presented at the interview as warranting favorable action must be filed by the applicant. An interview does not remove the necessity for reply to Office action as specified in §§ 1.111, 1.135. (35 U.S.C. 132)

37 CFR §1.2 Business to be transacted in writing.
All business with the Patent or Trademark Office should be transacted in writing. The personal attendance of applicants or their attorneys or agents at the Patent and Trademark Office is unnecessary. The action of the Patent and Trademark Office will be based exclusively on the written record in the Office. No attention will be paid to any alleged oral promise, stipulation, or understanding in relation to which there is disagreement or doubt.

The action of the Patent and Trademark Office cannot be based exclusively on the written record in the Office if that record is itself incomplete through the failure to record the substance of interviews.

It is the responsibility of the applicant or the attorney or agent to make the substance of an interview of record in the application file, unless the examiner indicates he or she will do so. It is the examiner's responsibility to see that such a record is made and to correct material inaccuracies which bear directly on the question of patentability.

Examiners must complete an Interview Summary Form for each interview held where a matter of substance has been discussed during the interview by checking the appropriate boxes and filling in the blanks. Discussions regarding only procedural matters, directed solely to restriction requirements for which interview recordation is otherwise provided for in Section 812.01 of the Manual of Patent Examining Procedure, or pointing out typographical errors or unreadable script in Office actions or the like, are excluded from the interview recordation procedures below. Where the substance of an interview is completely recorded in an Examiners Amendment, no separate Interview Summary Record is required.

The Interview Summary Form shall be given an appropriate Paper No., placed in the right hand portion of the file, and listed on the "Contents" section of the file wrapper. In a personal interview, a duplicate of the Form is given to the applicant (or attorney or agent) at the conclusion of the interview. In the case of a telephone or video-conference interview, the copy is mailed to the applicant's correspondence address either with or prior to the next official communication. If additional correspondence from the examiner is not likely before an allowance or if other circumstances dictate, the Form should be mailed promptly after the interview rather than with the next official communication.

The Form provides for recordation of the following information:
- Application Number (Series Code and Serial Number)
- Name of applicant
- Name of examiner
- Date of interview
- Type of interview (telephonic, video-conference, or personal)
- Name of participant(s) (applicant, attorney or agent, examiner, other PTO personnel, etc.)
- An indication whether or not an exhibit was shown or a demonstration conducted
- An identification of the specific prior art discussed
- An indication whether an agreement was reached and if so, a description of the general nature of the agreement (may be by attachment of a copy of amendments or claims agreed as being allowable). Note: Agreement as to allowability is tentative and does not restrict further action by the examiner to the contrary.
- The signature of the examiner who conducted the interview (if Form is not an attachment to a signed Office action)

It is desirable that the examiner orally remind the applicant of his or her obligation to record the substance of the interview of each case. It should be noted, however, that the Interview Summary Form will not normally be considered a complete and proper recordation of the interview unless it includes, or is supplemented by the applicant or the examiner to include, all of the applicable items required below concerning the substance of the interview.

A complete and proper recordation of the substance of any interview should include at least the following applicable items:

1) A brief description of the nature of any exhibit shown or any demonstration conducted,
2) an identification of the claims discussed,
3) an identification of the specific prior art discussed,
4) an identification of the principal proposed amendments of a substantive nature discussed, unless these are already described on the Interview Summary Form completed by the Examiner,
5) a brief identification of the general thrust of the principal arguments presented to the examiner,
   (The identification of arguments need not be lengthy or elaborate. A verbatim or highly detailed description of the arguments is not required. The identification of the arguments is sufficient if the general nature or thrust of the principal arguments made to the examiner can be understood in the context of the application file. Of course, the applicant may desire to emphasize and fully describe those arguments which he or she feels were or might be persuasive to the examiner.)
6) a general indication of any other pertinent matters discussed, and
7) if appropriate, the general results or outcome of the interview unless already described in the Interview Summary Form completed by the examiner.

Examiners are expected to carefully review the applicant's record of the substance of an interview. If the record is not complete and accurate, the examiner will give the applicant an extendable one month time period to correct the record.

Examiner to Check for Accuracy

If the claims are allowable for other reasons of record, the examiner should send a letter setting forth the examiner's version of the statement attributed to him or her. If the record is complete and accurate, the examiner should place the indication, "Interview Record OK" on the paper recording the substance of the interview along with the date and the examiner's initials.
