Pursuant to 37 C.F.R. § 42.54, the Board’s May 23, 2024 email authorizing such a Motion, and the parties’ June 4, 2024 conference call with the Board, Patent Owner AX Wireless, LLC and Petitioner Intel Corporation (the “Parties”) hereby file this Joint Motion for Entry of a Proposed Protective Order, a copy of which is filed concurrently as AXW-2080. This Joint Motion supersedes the Parties’ prior motion at Paper 30 (filed May 28, 2024).

The Parties have agreed to limited additional discovery in this proceeding of certain documents, expert reports, and inventor and expert deposition transcripts from related currently-pending district court litigation, AX Wireless LLC v. Dell Inc., No. 2:22-cv-00277 (E.D. Tex.), involving the patent-at-issue in this proceeding. In the district court litigation, the Parties previously arrived at a mutual agreement that such materials contain sensitive information that is highly confidential information relating to their core businesses, and that public disclosure of this information could significantly harm their competitive positions (collectively, “Protective Order Material”). To that end, in the related currently-pending district court action, the Parties negotiated, and the district court signed and entered, a protective order that is in effect, a copy of which was previously filed as AXW-2046. The Parties have jointly agreed to model the Joint Proposed Protective Order for this proceeding (AXW-2080) on the district court order (AXW-2046). See Consolidated Trial Practice Guide at 116 (“When a proceeding before the Board involves the same parties and subject matter as a parallel district court proceeding, parties may propose that a protective order entered by the district court be adopted by the Board.”). Good cause exists for the parties’ deviation from the Default Protective Order for the reasons stated herein.

The Parties respectfully submit that the district court’s approval, notwithstanding the public interest in general in court proceedings being public, of the Parties’ negotiated confidentiality protections for Protective Order Material; the fact that Intel agrees to the Joint Proposed Protective Order; the wide acceptance of the fact that highly sensitive and confidential technical information should be afforded protections from disclosure; and the confidential nature of the information that is the subject of the Joint Proposed Protective Order all weigh strongly in favor of granting this motion.

Moreover, importantly, the Parties submit that the negotiated specific protections in the existing protective order in district court with respect to Protective Order Material should be preserved. The parties negotiated these terms for several months prior to arriving at an agreed-upon protective order in the district court litigation. Specifically, sensitive business information and technical documents have been produced in the district court action under specific provisions to preserve their confidentiality. For example, under the protective order in the district court, highly sensitive business information and technical documents are not permitted to be seen by the non-producing party. The Parties request that this limitation on access to the Protective Order Material, which was negotiated between and agreed to by both AX Wireless and Intel in the district court litigation and in this proceeding, should be approved by the Board in this proceeding. This is reflected in the tiers of confidentiality included in the Joint Proposed Protective Order. See Consolidated Trial Practice Guide at 115-16 (“The Board will presumptively accept agreed-to changes that provide additional categories of confidentiality”). This restriction applies only to information that would already be sealed from the public view by the other provisions of the Joint Proposed Protective Order.

Additionally, the Joint Proposed Protective Order maintains the confidentiality designations used in the district court litigation, rather than that of the Default Protective Order to avoid unnecessary expenditure of resources re-stamping the documents expected to be used in these proceedings that have already been designated under the district court protective order.

Additionally, the Parties submit that additional negotiated specific protections in the existing protective order in district court with respect to Protective Order Material should be preserved in this proceeding. For example, under the protective order in the district court, the transporting of confidential material is restricted to either specific encrypted electronic transmission systems or hand delivery. These restrictions reduce the chance of inadvertent disclosure. The protective order in the district court additionally requires that a party disclosing an outside consultant provide the other party with additional information and allows the other party to object. This allows parties to verify that a disclosed consultant does not have a conflict of interest.

Finally, the Parties further negotiated and agreed upon provisions specific to this proceeding, including following guidance from the Board on the June 4, 2024 conference call. Additionally, the Parties agree that no source code should be submitted or otherwise used in this proceeding, and have therefore removed such clauses from AXW-2080, consistent with the Board's guidance on the June 4, 2024 conference call. See also Consolidated Trial Practice Guide at 116 ("The Board may enter [a protective order entered by the district court] especially if certain provisions commonly found in district court protective orders that are unnecessary or inappropriate in proceedings before the Board are removed before submitting the proposed protective order to the Board.").

Filed concurrently as AXW-2080 is a copy of the Joint Proposed Protective Order that the Parties jointly request be entered. The Parties respectfully request that the Joint Proposed Protective Order, filed concurrently as AXW-2080, govern the materials in this proceeding to the extent they are found to contain Protective Order Material. The Parties will abide by the terms of the Joint Proposed Protective Order. A redline comparison of the Joint Proposed Protective Order and the Default Protective Order is also filed concurrently as AXW-2081, consistent with the Board's instructions on the June 4, 2024 conference call. See Consolidated Trial Practice Guide at 91 ("If the parties choose to propose a protective order deviating from the default protective order, they must submit the proposed protective order jointly along with a marked-up comparison of the proposed and default protective orders showing the differences between the two and explain why good cause exists to deviate from the default protective order.").

Pursuant to 37 C.F.R. § 42.54, AX Wireless certifies that it conferred in good faith with Intel regarding this motion and the scope of the Joint Proposed Protective Order. The Parties jointly submit this Motion and agree to the terms of the Joint Proposed Protective Order filed concurrently as AXW-2080.

For the foregoing reasons, the Parties respectfully request the PTAB grant this motion and enter the Joint Proposed Protective Order filed concurrently as AXW-2080.
