	Stay of Proceedings ↳ Factors Considered ↳ Simplification of Issues Stay of Proceedings ↳ Factors Considered ↳ Stage of Litigation		The court granted defendant's motion to stay pending inter partes review and found that the potential simplification of the issues and stage of the case favored a stay. "IPR has been instituted on the asserted claims of the '958 patent. In addition, all the claims of the '958 patent have been rejected in the pending EPR. . . . Fact discovery has just begun, and the parties have taken no depositions and served no interrogatories. The Court has not yet conducted the Markman hearing, which is set for [seven months from now]. The bulk of the work in this case has yet to take place."

	Infringement Defenses ↳ PTAB Post-Decision Estoppel ↳ PTAB Petitioner Estoppel Following IPR (35 USC § 315(e))		The court ordered defendant to file a notice regarding estoppel after defendant moved to stay pending inter partes review. "[Defendant] represents to the Court that it moved to join BMW's IPR by filing its own IPR petition setting forth the same ground against the same claims using the same prior art as in the BMW IPR. . . . The Court understands that 'because a joining party cannot bring with it grounds other than those already instituted, that party is not statutorily estopped from raising other invalidity grounds.' Accordingly, the Court directs [Defendant] to file a notice . . . advising the Court as to whether [Defendant] agrees to be bound by the full statutory estoppel provision of 35 U.S.C. § 315(e) based on any ground raised or that reasonably could have been raised as part 2 of the BMW IPR proceeding, or alternatively, whether [Defendant] intends to rely on the limited estoppel applying to joined parties such that it might advance new invalidity theories after the conclusion of the BMW IPR."

	Stay of Proceedings ↳ Factors Considered ↳ Prejudice From Stay/Tactical Advantage Stay of Proceedings ↳ Factors Considered ↳ Simplification of Issues Stay of Proceedings ↳ Factors Considered ↳ Stage of Litigation		The court denied defendants' motion to stay pending institution of inter partes review and found that the lack of simplification of the issues, stage of the case, and potential for prejudice disfavored a stay. "None of [Defendants'] IPRs have been instituted, and there is no institution decision for the '337 patent IPR. . . . Defendants' attempt to rely on non-party Samsung's IPRs is misguided. The fact that the claims of the '337 patent and the '081 patent may share some common language does not guarantee that the PTAB will institute IPR on the '337 patent. . . . Defendants waited 10 months after service of this lawsuit to file its IPRs. . . . Granting a stay in this case could delay its resolution by more than two years, as the PTAB decision is not due until over 8 months after jury trial is set to begin. Such a delay would prejudice Plaintiff's ability to vindicate its patent rights."

Stay of Proceedings Factors Considered Prejudice From Stay/Tactical Advantage Stay of Proceedings Factors Considered Simplification of Issues		The court denied defendant's motion to sever one count of plaintiff's patent infringement suit and stay it pending inter partes review and found that the lack of simplification of the issues and the potential for undue prejudice disfavored a stay. "Given that the PTAB has indicated a likelihood of success only for asserted claims 1, 2, and 7—not asserted claims 3 and 5—and especially in light of the PTAB's skepticism regarding Ground 4, it seems possible, and in fact likely, that claim 5 (if not other asserted claims) will survive the IPR proceedings. . . . Doing as [Defendant] requests would ensure that if any claims survived the IPR proceeding . . . the Court and the parties would have to undertake duplicative actions, including redundant damages and technical discovery on overlapping accused products, two separate claim construction hearings, two pre-trial conferences, and two trials. Such a multiplication of this proceeding would unnecessarily drive up the costs and efforts required to adjudicate [Plaintiff's] patent rights, resulting in undue prejudice to [Plaintiff]."

Stay of Proceedings Factors Considered Prejudice From Stay/Tactical Advantage Stay of Proceedings Factors Considered Stage of Litigation		The court denied defendant's renewed motion to stay pending inter partes review and found that the lack of undue prejudice and stage of the case disfavored a stay. "A delay in the proceedings would be prejudicial to [Plaintiff] as a competitor to [Defendant], and any stay could be further extended if either party appeals the PTAB's findings to the Federal Circuit. Further, the Court is convinced that timely resolution of [Plaintiff's] patent claims are warranted given that the next generation DIMMs will soon make the allegedly infringing accused DIMMs obsolete. The fact that [Plaintiff] is seeking solely monetary damages does not mean that [Plaintiff] cannot be prejudiced by a significant delay of an imminent trial date. . . . The parties have engaged in substantial discovery, claim construction, and have served expert reports. Further, the trial is only a few months away."

Stay of Proceedings Factors Considered Simplification of Issues Stay of Proceedings Factors Considered Stage of Litigation		The court granted defendants' motion to stay pending inter partes review and found that the potential simplification of the issues favored a stay. "If the PTAB were to find some or all of the claims under review to be valid, Defendants would be estopped from asserting invalidity defenses on any grounds they raised or reasonably could have raised during inter partes review. Further, the cancellation of some or all of the claims could result in simplification of issues in this case. This Court declines [Plaintiff's] invitation to hold that the PTAB must expressly comment that the grounds for institution are particularly 'strong' as to every claim to find that there is a likelihood of issue simplification. . . . To adopt this posture would essentially allow the PTAB to decide the stay issue by making or withholding early evaluating comments." The court granted defendants' motion to stay pending inter partes review and found that the stage of the case favored a stay. "[T]his case has not yet had a Markman hearing. At the time of the filing of the present Motion, the parties had only conducted 8 two depositions. [Defendant] alleges (and [Plaintiff] does not dispute) that the parties still have the bulk of depositions ahead of them, including depositions in Korea. . . . While [Defendant] could have acted sooner in initially filing its petitions for inter partes review, it filed its Motion to Stay with reasonable dispatch and at an early stage of the case[.]"

Stay of Proceedings Factors Considered Reduction of Litigation Burden Stay of Proceedings Factors Considered Simplification of Issues District Court Procedural Issues Motion Practice in General Reconsideration		The court sua sponte reconsidered an earlier order declining to stay the case pending inter partes review and instead instituted a stay. "This case began with six asserted patents. All of these patents have been instituted for review by the Patent Trial and Appeal Board (PTAB). Four of these six patents have been invalidated by the PTAB. These decisions are being appealed. The remaining two patents . . . have been instituted for review by the PTAB but no decision has been issued to date. However, it is expected that the decisions from the PTAB will issue by or before [two months from now]. To put this particular case to trial before a jury in this Court before the PTAB issues its decision on the two remaining patents risks an inefficient consumption of limited judicial resources that makes imposing a targeted stay, until that ruling is received, advisable."

District Court Procedural Issues ↳ Stay of Proceedings		The court denied without prejudice as premature defendant's motion to stay pending inter partes review. "Considering these circumstances, the Court concludes that [Defendant's] Motion is premature in that only three out of the four Asserted Patents has had a decision instituting IPRs. A stay of these proceedings in advance of the PTAB's decision on whether or not to institute inter partes review as to all of the Asserted Patents should be denied. Accordingly, the Motion is denied without prejudice to refiling of the same, which shall be permitted within fourteen (14) days following the PTAB's institution decision regarding the last of the patents-in-suit to be acted upon by the PTAB."

Stay of Proceedings ↳ Factors Considered ↳ Prejudice From Stay/Tactical Advantage Stay of Proceedings ↳ Factors Considered ↳ Stage of Litigation		The court denied defendants' motion to stay pending inter partes review and found that the potential for undue prejudice, stage of the case, and lack of simplification of the issues disfavored a stay. "[Plaintiff] has an interest in the timely enforcement of its patent rights. Granting a stay in this case could delay the case by nearly two years There was no unreasonable delay in filing suit on part of [Plaintiff]. . . . [T]he Court is persuaded by [Plaintiff's] argument that because [Defendant] is receiving the benefit of post-motion facts—the PTAB decision instituting IPR—[Plaintiff] should receive the same regarding the stage of litigation. . . . [T]he deadline for the PTAB's final written decision is . . . over two and a half months after trial is set to begin in this case. Given the substantial amount of work and financial resources already poured into this case, this factor does not favor a stay. . . . The Court is reluctant to grant a stay, thereby delaying timely enforcement of [Plaintiff's] patent rights for months (and possibly years), where the PTAB has not found that [Defendant] is likely to succeed on most, if not all, of the asserted claims."

	Stay of Proceedings ↳ Factors Considered ↳ Prejudice From Stay/Tactical Advantage Stay of Proceedings ↳ Factors Considered ↳ Simplification of Issues Stay of Proceedings ↳ Factors Considered ↳ Stage of Litigation		The court granted defendants' motion to stay pending inter partes review and determined that the lack of undue prejudice, the stage of the proceedings, and the potential simplification of the issues favored a stay. "Plaintiff fails to establish that monetary damages are inadequate to remedy any harm caused by Defendants. Indeed, Plaintiff's concerns of delay are undermined by the fact that a final written decision on the patentability of the claims must be issued within one year of institution. . . . Defendants could have acted sooner in filing their petitions for inter partes review. However, with the close of discovery, the claim construction hearing, and the trial setting all in the future, the Court concludes that this factor weighs in favor of a stay, but only slightly. . . . [G]iven that inter partes review has been instituted on all claims of the '444 Patent and on multiple grounds, the likelihood of simplification of issues is material."

	Stay of Proceedings ↳ Factors Considered ↳ Simplification of Issues Stay of Proceedings ↳ Factors Considered ↳ Stage of Litigation		The court granted defendants' motion to stay pending inter partes review and determined that the stage of the case and potential simplification of the issues favored a stay. "Significantly, even though the IPR petitions were filed two months after this lawsuit was initiated, Plaintiff had yet to serve Defendants by the time the IPR petitions were filed The Court finds that Defendants acted with reasonable dispatch in filing their petitions for inter partes review and their Motion. . . . The PTAB found that Defendants established a reasonable likelihood that they would prevail as to at least one of their challenged claims and instituted inter partes review as to all of the challenged claims on all of the grounds of unpatentability asserted in the petitions. . . . [T]he Court finds that the likelihood of simplification of issues is high."

	Stay of Proceedings ↳ Factors Considered ↳ Prejudice From Stay/Tactical Advantage Stay of Proceedings ↳ Factors Considered ↳ Simplification of Issues Stay of Proceedings ↳ Factors Considered ↳ Stage of Litigation		The court denied defendants' motion to stay pending institution of inter partes review and determined that the potential for prejudice, stage of the case, and lack of simplification of the issues disfavored a stay. "The IPR proceedings at the PTAB are currently in their infancy (having been requested almost a year after the filing of the present action), and therefore granting a stay would require both [parties] to conduct the entire inter partes review proceeding from its initial stages. By contrast, the present case is approximately eight months from jury selection, and the parties have behind them a large portion of the expense related to discovery and claim construction. . . . [Defendant] waited ten months after this case was initiated to file its IPRs and to seek a stay from the Court. . . . [Defendant] cites to generic statistics that 'the PTAB instituted 66% of trial petitions' in 2022 to conclude that it is likely that the PTAB will likewise institute [Defendant's] IPRs. The Court is not persuaded by such speculation."

— Motion to Stay Pending Inter Partes Review	Denied	Viavi Solutions Inc. v. Zhejiang Crystal-Optech Co Ltd. 2-21-cv-00378 (EDTX)	Nov. 10, 2022
Stay of Proceedings ↳ Factors Considered ↳ Simplification of Issues		The court denied defendant's motion to stay pending institution of inter partes review based on the lack of simplification of the issues. "[T]he petitions discussed in the IPR Motion have not been instituted upon by the PTAB. It is the Court's established practice to consider that motions to stay pending IPR proceedings which have not been instituted are inherently premature and should be denied as such. At this nascent stage of the PTAB proceedings, it is impossible for the Court to determine 'whether the stay will likely result in simplifying the case before the court.' Indeed, if the PTAB denies institution of the IPRs, there will be no simplification of the case before the Court at all."

Stay of Proceedings ↳ Factors Considered ↳ Prejudice From Stay/Tactical Advantage Stay of Proceedings ↳ Factors Considered ↳ Simplification of Issues Stay of Proceedings ↳ Factors Considered ↳ Stage of Litigation		The court denied defendants' motion to stay pending inter partes review and concluded that the potential for undue prejudice, stage of the case, and lack of potential simplification of the issues disfavored a stay. "[A]lthough the PTAB found a 'reasonable likelihood' that claim 10 of the [patent-at-issue] will be determined unpatentable under all asserted grounds of unpatentability, there remains a relative possibility that the PTAB concludes otherwise. In such a scenario, Claim 10 . . . would remain and result in a second trial. . . . Significant deadlines, such as claim construction and fact discovery, have already passed. Other important dates, such as the pretrial conference and trial, have been extended by up to three months but are quickly approaching. . . . A partial stay could divide this case into two cases and require two trials, significantly complicating matters."

Stay of Proceedings ↳ Factors Considered ↳ Prejudice From Stay/Tactical Advantage Stay of Proceedings ↳ Factors Considered ↳ Stage of Litigation		The court denied defendant's motion to stay pending inter partes review of two of three patents-in-suit because the undue prejudice to plaintiff and advanced stage of the case weighed against a stay. "Here, where fact discovery, expert discovery, and pre-trial motion practice are complete and [plaintiff] has already incurred the majority of its expenses associated with this litigation, a delay of the imminent trial date and the assertion of its patent rights unduly prejudices [plaintiff]. . . . This case is in a particularly advanced stage, and a jury trial on the current schedule will have long concluded before the PTAB is likely to issue final written decisions."

Stay of Proceedings ↳ Factors Considered ↳ Prejudice From Stay/Tactical Advantage Stay of Proceedings ↳ Factors Considered ↳ Simplification of Issues Stay of Proceedings ↳ Factors Considered ↳ Stage of Litigation		Following a jury trial and a judgment that was affirmed in part on appeal, the court denied defendant's motion to stay pending inter partes review plaintiff's appeal of final written decisions finding the patents-in-suit to be unpatentable. "[Plaintiff] tried this case [5 years ago] and has yet to recover monetary relief despite successfully defending its finding of infringement and pre-suit damages on appeal -- delaying this case further in the face of its advanced stage only increases the prejudice on PI and places it at a tactical disadvantage. . . . These proceedings are at an unquestionably advanced stage -- the Court and the parties have expended substantial resources in adjudicating the parties' issues. . . . Given that the only issues remaining are discrete damages-related issues that do not overlap with the previously-affirmed issues of validity, [defendant's] arguments related to estoppel are misplaced and this factor strongly weighs against granting a stay."

Stay of Proceedings ↳ Factors Considered ↳ Simplification of Issues		The court denied defendant's motion to stay pending inter partes review and ex parte reexamination because the lack of potential simplification of issues weighed against a stay. "With regard to the IPR proceedings, [plaintiff] is correct that the absence of any estoppel binding on [defendant] as a result of those proceedings renders the issue simplification factor either neutral or slightly against a stay. Likewise, for the EPR proceedings, [defendant's] motion is at best premature. While [defendant] has informed the Court that EPR requests were granted as to all four Asserted Patents, it does not report that any Office Actions have issued rejecting any of the asserted claims. . . . It is the movant's burden to demonstrate that a stay is warranted, and the Court concludes that [defendant's] Motion fails to meet that burden in this case."

Stay of Proceedings ↳ Factors Considered ↳ Simplification of Issues		The court denied defendant's motion to stay pending inter partes review because a lack of potential simplification of issues weighed against a stay. "[T]he PTAB has declined to institute review regarding two of the six Asserted Patents. . . . [A] stay will not simplify any issues with respect to the instituted [four] Patents because the PTAB granted [plaintiff's] motions to amend, allowing substitute claims to issue rather than cancelling the claims altogether. The PTAB's decisions thus did not narrow the remaining validity issues -- and in fact made them more complex -- as the amended claims may require [defendant] to assert additional prior art references and combinations. . . . Regardless of how the case ultimately proceeds, there has been no simplification -- nor is such reasonably foreseeable -- as a result of the IPRs that have been filed."

Stay of Proceedings ↳ Factors Considered ↳ Prejudice From Stay/Tactical Advantage Stay of Proceedings ↳ Factors Considered ↳ Simplification of Issues Stay of Proceedings ↳ Factors Considered ↳ Stage of Litigation		The court denied defendants' motion to stay pending inter partes and post-grant review proceedings because the lack of potential simplification of issues, stage of the case, and undue prejudice to plaintiff weighed against a stay. "[T]he PTAB has declined to institute regarding two of the four remaining Asserted Patents. Thus, a stay will not simplify the case with respect to the non-instituted [two patents]. Although a stay could in theory simplify the remaining validity issues with respect to the instituted [two patents], the PTAB would not render its final written decision until approximately. . . 9 months after this Court's . . . trial date. [Defendant's] offer to withdraw its Motion to Stay with respect to the non-instituted [patents] would in effect require the Court to hold two entirely separate trials -- potentially more than a year apart. . . . Such an approach would create significant inefficiencies that would more than offset any simplification gained through the IPR process."

Stay of Proceedings ↳ Factors Considered ↳ Simplification of Issues		The court denied without prejudice defendant's motion to stay pending its petitions for inter partes review. "Where a motion to stay is filed before the PTAB institutes any proceeding, courts often withhold a ruling pending action on the petition by the PTAB or deny the motion without prejudice to refiling in the event that the PTAB institutes a proceeding. Indeed, this Court has a consistent practice of denying motions to stay when the PTAB has yet to institute post-grant proceedings."

Stay of Proceedings ↳ Factors Considered ↳ Simplification of Issues		The court denied defendant's motion to stay pending inter partes review after the PTAB denied all ten of its petitions for review. "After [defendant] filed the Motion to Stay, the PTAB denied all ten petitions for IPR regarding the Asserted Patents. . . . Here, the PTAB has declined to institute an IPR trial regarding any of the asserted claims. Accordingly, a stay will not simplify the case."

— Motion to Stay Pending Inter Partes Review	Granted	Nanoco Technologies, Ltd. v. Samsung Electronics Co., Ltd. et al 2-20-cv-00038 (EDTX)	Jul. 01, 2021			Stay of Proceedings ↳ Factors Considered ↳ Simplification of Issues Stay of Proceedings ↳ Factors Considered ↳ Stage of Litigation	The court granted the parties' joint motion to stay pending inter partes review. "The Court, having considered the relevant factors, is hesitant to stay this case. Discovery is complete. . . . A firm trial date is set. Although a stay could simplify issues for trial in the abstract and on paper, it does so at the expense of delaying the speedy and efficient adjudication of the other issues in controversy. [Defendant] filed its IPR petitions roughly nine months after [plaintiff] filed its complaint. Given the fairly predictable timelines in this Court and the statutory timelines at the PTAB, [defendant] could have anticipated that institution decisions would occur in the shadow of pre-trial briefing, with the potential date for final written decisions from the PTAB far exceeding the scheduled trial date in this Court. . . . In fact, it is increasingly common for the PTAB to decline to institute inter partes review in view of parallel district court proceedings if the district court will reach trial on the merits more efficiently and expeditiously. . . . But for the parties' agreement on the Motion, the Court would likely have denied this Motion."

"This case is in a particularly advanced stage, and a jury trial on the current schedule will have long concluded before the PTAB is likely to issue final written decisions. . . . Given the complexity of the legal issues before the PTAB (including a prior art challenge pendent on application of 35 U.S.C. § 112), the possibility of further delays due to appeal is almost certain. . . . [I]ssue simplification . . . also weighs against granting a stay, given [the parties'] respective narrowing of their asserted claims and defenses. The Court and the PTAB are presented with separate issues, and there is no reason those issues cannot be adjudicated in parallel."

"While not much weight is given to a delay in the initial prejudice analysis, the additional delay pending appeal is considerable and holds weight. The Court also finds that the PTAB's decision upholding the validity of Claim 14 constitutes a material change in the facts. Further, [plaintiff] is certainly prejudiced by not being able to assert a valid claim while the IPR judgments are being appealed. . . . "[T]his Court generally denies motions to stay pending institution of an inter partes review. No reason exists in this context to deviate from such practice. Here, no inter partes review petition against [one patent-in-suit] has been instituted. Additionally, no inter partes review petition has been filed against [a second] Patent. . . . Even as to the [third] Patent's IPR proceeding, the fact that '[t]wo of the three Administrative Panel [sic] Judges who instituted [a prior] IPR [on the that patent] are assigned to [another] IPR,' does not, as Defendants suggest, provide any support for such a stay. "[T]he [PTAB] has instituted review of every asserted claim of all patents asserted against the Defendants. . . . [T]he Court is persuaded that the benefits of a stay outweigh the costs of postponing resolution of the litigation in this case. Here, the patent claims have not yet been construed by the Court, and discovery is not yet complete. Moreover, even if the PTAB does not invalidate every claim on which it has instituted IPR, there is a significant likelihood that the outcome of the IPR proceedings will streamline the scope of this case to an appreciable extent. . . . District Court Procedural Issues Stay of Proceedings The court denied without prejudice defendants' motion to stay pending their petitions for inter partes review. "To the Court's knowledge the [PTAB] has not yet acted on Defendants' petitions, but should provide decisions regarding whether or not to institute review on the earliest of the Petitions soon; however, due to the most recent IPR petition being filed a mere nineteen days ago, there is little chance that all of the IPR petitions will be acted upon until early summer of next year. . . . [T]his Court has a consistent practice of denying motions to stay when the PTAB has yet to institute post-grant proceedings."

Stay of Proceedings ↳ Factors Considered ↳ Simplification of Issues		The court granted defendant's renewed motion to stay pending inter partes review after the PTAB instituted review because the potential simplification of issues favored a stay. "Potential costs, delay, or prejudice resulting from postponing the resolution of the case are outweighed by the benefits of a stay in this case. Since only one asserted claim is not currently under a simultaneous IPR review, there is a material possibility that the outcome of all IPR proceedings will streamline the scope and resolution of this case."

Stay of Proceedings ↳ Factors Considered ↳ Prejudice From Stay/Tactical Advantage Stay of Proceedings ↳ Factors Considered ↳ Simplification of Issues Stay of Proceedings ↳ Factors Considered ↳ Stage of Litigation		The court denied defendants' motion to stay pending inter partes review because the lack of potential simplification of issues, prejudice to plaintiff, and stage of the case weighed against transfer. "[A] stay would do little to simplify the issues here. Indeed, the PTAB has declined to institute on a majority of the Asserted Claims. . . . Additionally, the instituted IPRs only cover a narrow slice of the invalidity arguments Defendants have raised in this case. . . . Defendants argue that Plaintiff will suffer no prejudice because [plaintiff] 'does not produce or sell any products' and thus it can be compensated, if infringement were eventually found, through damages, including for the period covered by the stay. However . . . 'a plaintiff has a right to timely enforcement of its patent rights'. . . [T]he Parties have already invested substantial effort and resources during discovery and in preparing claim construction briefing. These circumstances weigh against staying this case. This is particularly true with respect to Defendants' 'follow-on' petitions, which were filed well after this case was underway."

Stay of Proceedings ↳ Factors Considered ↳ Simplification of Issues Stay of Proceedings ↳ Factors Considered ↳ Stage of Litigation		The court granted defendant's motion to stay six consolidated cases pending inter partes review because the stage of the case and potential simplification of issues favored a stay. "[T]he [PTAB] has instituted Inter Partes Review on [two patents-in-suit]. [Defendant] also has pending requests for IPRs on [two other patents-in-suit]. . . . No patent claims have been construed by the Court in these cases and discovery has barely begun. Moreover, there is a significant likelihood that the outcome of the IPR proceedings will streamline the scope and resolution of these cases because they all involve related patents and products. Indeed, the [two patents in the pending petition] are continuations of [a patent already under review] and all the patents share a common specification as well as numerous overlapping terms."

Apple Inc. 2-16-cv-00638 (EDTX) Jun. 13, 2017 PDF	Stay of Proceedings Factors Considered Simplification of Issues	The court granted defendant's motion to stay pending inter partes review because the potential simplification of issues and stage of the case favored a stay. "[Defendant's] Motion explains that the [PTAB] has instituted review of every asserted claim of three of the four patents asserted against [movant]. . . . [One of the instituted patents] is the parent of the other three patents asserted against Apple, including the patent on which the PTAB has not instituted review. . . . [T]he patent claims have not yet been construed by the Court, and discovery is not yet complete. Moreover, even if the PTAB does not invalidate every claim on which it has instituted IPR, there is a significant likelihood that the outcome of the IPR proceedings will streamline the scope of this case to an appreciable extent."

"This Court has previously reasoned that 'it is unwilling to adopt a per se rule that patent cases should be stayed during reexamination because some of the relevant claims may be affected. . . .' However, in this case, the PTAB has instituted review on all claims asserted against [defendants]. This is a distinction with a difference. . . . As [defendants] correctly note, the [patent] IPR proceeding has the potential to be entirely case dispositive, which would be the 'ultimate simplification of issues.'"

Stay of Proceedings - Factors Considered - Prejudice From Stay/Tactical Advantage Stay of Proceedings - Factors Considered - Simplification of Issues Stay of Proceedings - Factors Considered - Stage of Litigation		The court denied defendants' renewed motion to stay pending inter partes review because the lack of potential simplification of issues, late stage of the case, and undue prejudice to plaintiff weighed against a stay. "[T]he Court observes that [defendants'] invalidity theories far exceed the limited scope of the pending IPR. Here, the PTAB has instituted IPR on only one of five asserted patents, which amounts to 6 of 38 asserted claims. Further, IPR on the [patent] was instituted for only two prior art references. The scope of this IPR is very narrow and targeted. . . . Even considering the possibility that the [one] patent could be invalidated or, if not, that [defendants] would be estopped from asserting certain prior references (2 out of 30), the pending IPR will have a negligible impact on potentially streamlining this case. . . . [J]ury trial in this case is currently set to begin in less than two months. . . . [T]he Court specifically notes that although [defendant] did timely file its petitions for IPR (avoiding the statutory deadline by one day), it could have filed them earlier in order to avoid the present result."

Stay of Proceedings - Factors Considered - Prejudice From Stay/Tactical Advantage Stay of Proceedings - Factors Considered - Simplification of Issues District Court Procedural Issues - Stay of Proceedings - Conditions of Stay		The court denied defendant's motion to stay pending inter partes review initiated by third parties in one of plaintiff's other actions because the lack of potential simplification of issues and undue prejudice did not favor a stay. "In this case, the [PTO] has not instituted review on all of the asserted claims nor have defendants agreed to be bound by the estoppel provisions of 35 U.S.C. § 315 as would the petitioner. . . . [T]he limited estoppel proposed by Defendants may not actually simplify the issues at all. . . . [U]nder the limited estoppel proposed here, Defendants could raise new obvious combinations using old prior art the PTO considered, provided at least one new (perhaps inane) reference not previously considered by the PTO is used to meet one claim element. This would not simplify the case; rather, it very well might complicate the case, by precipitating a dispute as to whether such a combination fell within the carefully worded limited estoppel, i.e., whether such combination fell within 'a specific ground(s) upon which those IPRs were instituted'. . . . [A] full statutory estoppel would avoid such disputes, but, as some have called it, 'estoppel light' would not. The absence of a full statutory estoppel not only increases the ability of litigants to 'game the system' and devise an unfair second bite at the apple, it also has the potential to increase rather than reduce the complexity of the validity issues that may come before the Court."

District Court Procedural Issues - Severing, Consolidating & Relating District Court Procedural Issues - Stay of Proceedings		The court granted in part defendant's motion to stay pending conclusion of inter partes review proceedings and severed the claims under review into a separate action. "As to the remaining claims which are not severed (principally concerning [one patent-in-suit]), the Court orders that Jury Selection for trial in this case is now set [in one month]. . . . [Defendant] argues for a stay of the entire case because the [PTAB] has instituted Inter Partes Review proceedings on all patents asserted in this case, specifically, 53 out of 58 asserted claims. . . . In view of the changed status of this case and the forthcoming date for the final written decisions covering all the asserted claims regarding two of the patents-in-suit [in 3 months], the Court is of the opinion that it is in the best interest of judicial economy to sever Plaintiff's claims concerning the stayed patents into a new action. Such new action shall be stayed until further order of this Court."

"[T]his Court has a consistent practice of denying motions to stay when the PTAB has yet to institute post-grant proceedings. . . . [I]t would be speculative for the Court to extrapolate from the cited statistics and conclude that the PTAB will institute inter partes review in this case and then go further to invalidate some or all of the claims of the challenged patents. The likelihood of institution and invalidation 'depends entirely on the particulars of the patents and claims in dispute.'"

Stay of Proceedings ↳ Factors Considered ↳ Prejudice From Stay/Tactical Advantage Stay of Proceedings ↳ Factors Considered ↳ Simplification of Issues		The court granted in part defendants' motion to stay a pending inter partes review and stayed the case until the PTAB issued its rulings on both of Defendants' petitions for inter partes review because the undue prejudice to plaintiff was neutral and the potential simplification of issues favored a stay. "Plaintiff alleges that it will likely take years for the inter partes review proceedings to become final through appeal and argues that a 'three-year stay' will unduly prejudice its rights as a patent owner. However, Defendants have not requested a three-year stay. Instead, Defendants ask the Court to stay the present litigation only until the PTAB has completed its review and issued final written decisions. . . . Plaintiff additionally notes that Defendants have raised other invalidity arguments that are outside the purview of inter partes review. However, the Court finds that the likelihood of simplification of issues is high since the PTAB has instituted review of almost all of the claims at issue in this case."

Stay of Proceedings ↳ Factors Considered ↳ Prejudice From Stay/Tactical Advantage Stay of Proceedings ↳ Factors Considered ↳ Simplification of Issues		The court denied defendants' motions to stay pending inter partes review and ex parte reexamination because the undue prejudice to plaintiff, lack of potential simplification of issues weighed against a stay. "[Plaintiff's] complaint against [one defendant] is over three years old and its complaint against [another] is over two years old. . . . Defendants argue that the case should be stayed once more because there are patents related to the patents-in-suit — but not actually at issue in this case — that are before the PTO in post-grant proceedings. . . . A further stay on that basis would be for an indeterminate amount of time and would therefore unduly prejudice [plaintiff] by throwing its effort to adjudicate its claims back into limbo. . . . This case will require a trial regardless of what happens at the PTO. . . . [D]iscovery is very nearly complete and a trial date has already been set and is approaching quickly."

Stay of Proceedings ↳ Factors Considered ↳ Prejudice From Stay/Tactical Advantage Stay of Proceedings ↳ Factors Considered ↳ Stage of Litigation Stay of Proceedings ↳ Factors Considered ↳ Simplification of Issues		The court granted defendant's motion to stay pending inter partes review because the lack of undue prejudice and the relatively early stage of the case weighed in favor of a stay. "[I]n this case, [defendant] is seeking a 9-month (from filing) stay . . . rather than the two to four years identified by [plaintiff]. . . . The Court also observes that [defendant] filed its petition more than four months before [plaintiff] filed suit. Importantly, there is no indication here that [defendant] has gamed the system created by the Leahy-Smith America Invents Act by treating the IPR process as a 'second bite at the apple' rather than the alternative to district court litigation that Congress intended."
Stay of Proceedings ↳ Factors Considered ↳ Simplification of Issues		The court granted defendant's motion to stay pending inter partes review even though the potential simplification of issues factor was neutral because there was a related case involving the same patent in suit. "[Plaintiff] . . . argu[es] that the IPR will not meaningfully reduce the issues before the Court because of the existence of a related case filed recently against [a voluntarily dismissed defendant in this action] involving the asserted patent. . . . [Plaintiff] appears to assume that the cases will be consolidated and argues that the IPR will not simplify the issues because 'a substantial number of claims in all but one asserted patent will inevitably survive.' . . . The Court notes that the 'related case' [plaintiff] refers to has not been consolidated into the present case, nor has any request for consolidation been made by any of the parties in either case. . . . [T]his factor is neutral."
