Back Carry

Age: 0-24 months

0-4 months (7-12lb / 3.2-5.5kgs): Must use Infant Insert (sold separately)

4-24 months (12lbs–26.9lbs / 5.5kgs–12.2kgs): Without Infant Insert - Use once baby can sit knee to knee in a frog-leg position in Carrier

Ways to Use:

Everyday use

Benefits:

Baby close and kissable

Can nurse easily

Baby faces in to avoid overstimulation

Hood can hold a sleeping baby's head and provide shelter from sun and wind

Baby's weight leans towards your center of gravity making her feel lighter

Watch-outs:

As baby gets heavier, front carry can strain the back

Curious babies sometimes prefer a front seat view of the world (facing out). You know your baby best

Age: 5-12 months

14-22lbs / 6.4-10kgs

Ways to Use:

Best for babies who are ready to face the world

Recommended for limited durations (10-15min) of carrying time

Benefits:

Baby has a front seat view of the world and can satisfy their curiosity

Co-viewing situations (ex. zoos, aquariums, short walks) where parent and baby can engage together

Watch-outs:

Baby must face you until he or she can hold their head upright

If your baby appears to be sleepy or overstimulated, turn them around immediately to an inward-facing position

Baby's weight pulls away from you which can make it feel heavier, so we recommend varying carrying positions as much as possible

Tip:

Use "selfie" camera mode or a mirror to check on your baby

Age: 6-24 months

17.2lbs–26.9lbs / 7.8kgs–12.2kgs

Ways to Use:

Best for around the house

Benefits:

A great hands-free way to carry your baby

Good for when your toddler wants to be picked up

You have more space on one side for doing household chores or reaching

Watch-outs:

Baby's weight is completely on one side of your body, so we recommend varying hips and carry positions as much as possible

Takes a bit of practice to master this position

Age: 6-36 months

17.2lbs–33lbs / 7.8kgs–15kgs

Ways to Use:

Best for longer treks, hiking, or extended wearing

Benefits:

Baby's weight leans in making him/her feel much lighter than using other positions

Baby has great visibility of the environment around him or her

Baby can turn in towards parent to avoid an overstimulating situation

Great carry position for an older baby or toddler

Watch-outs:

Takes a bit a practice to master this position

Never carry baby outward facing on your back

Tip:

Use "selfie" camera mode or a mirror to check on your baby

Is the Ergobaby Four Position 360 a front facing carrier?

No, the Four Position 360 Carrier is a 4 position carrier that offers front-inward, front-outward, hip, and back carry positions. The Front-Outward position is an option for parents.

Is the Ergobaby 360 a "crotch dangler"?

What are the age and weight guidelines for the 4 carry positions?

What are the buttons at the base of the shoulder straps used for?

Up to now, Ergobaby has only offered 'inward facing' carriers. Why are you now offering a carrier where the child 'faces out'?

In the past you have championed the idea that children are subject to a great deal of distractions/overstimulation when carried "facing out". How can you reconcile this with your previous philosophy? Are you not sending mixed messages to parents?

How do I know if my baby is ready for Front-Outward facing position?

Is the Front-Outward position ergonomic for the baby?

Is forward facing comfortable for parents?

Can I alternate between front-inward and front-outward positions with the carrier on?

At what age can I carry my baby in the back carry position?

What do midwives and baby wearing consultants have to say about Ergobaby's new Four Position 360 Carrier?

There is a belief that only the 'facing in' position puts children in the anatomically correct spread-legged sitting position. How did you resolve this problem?

With the front inward position, the infant's head is supported; what about when worn front-outward?

As a parent, how do I decide: What is better for my child, facing in or facing out? And how can I know?

Is the new Four Position 360 Carrier safe?

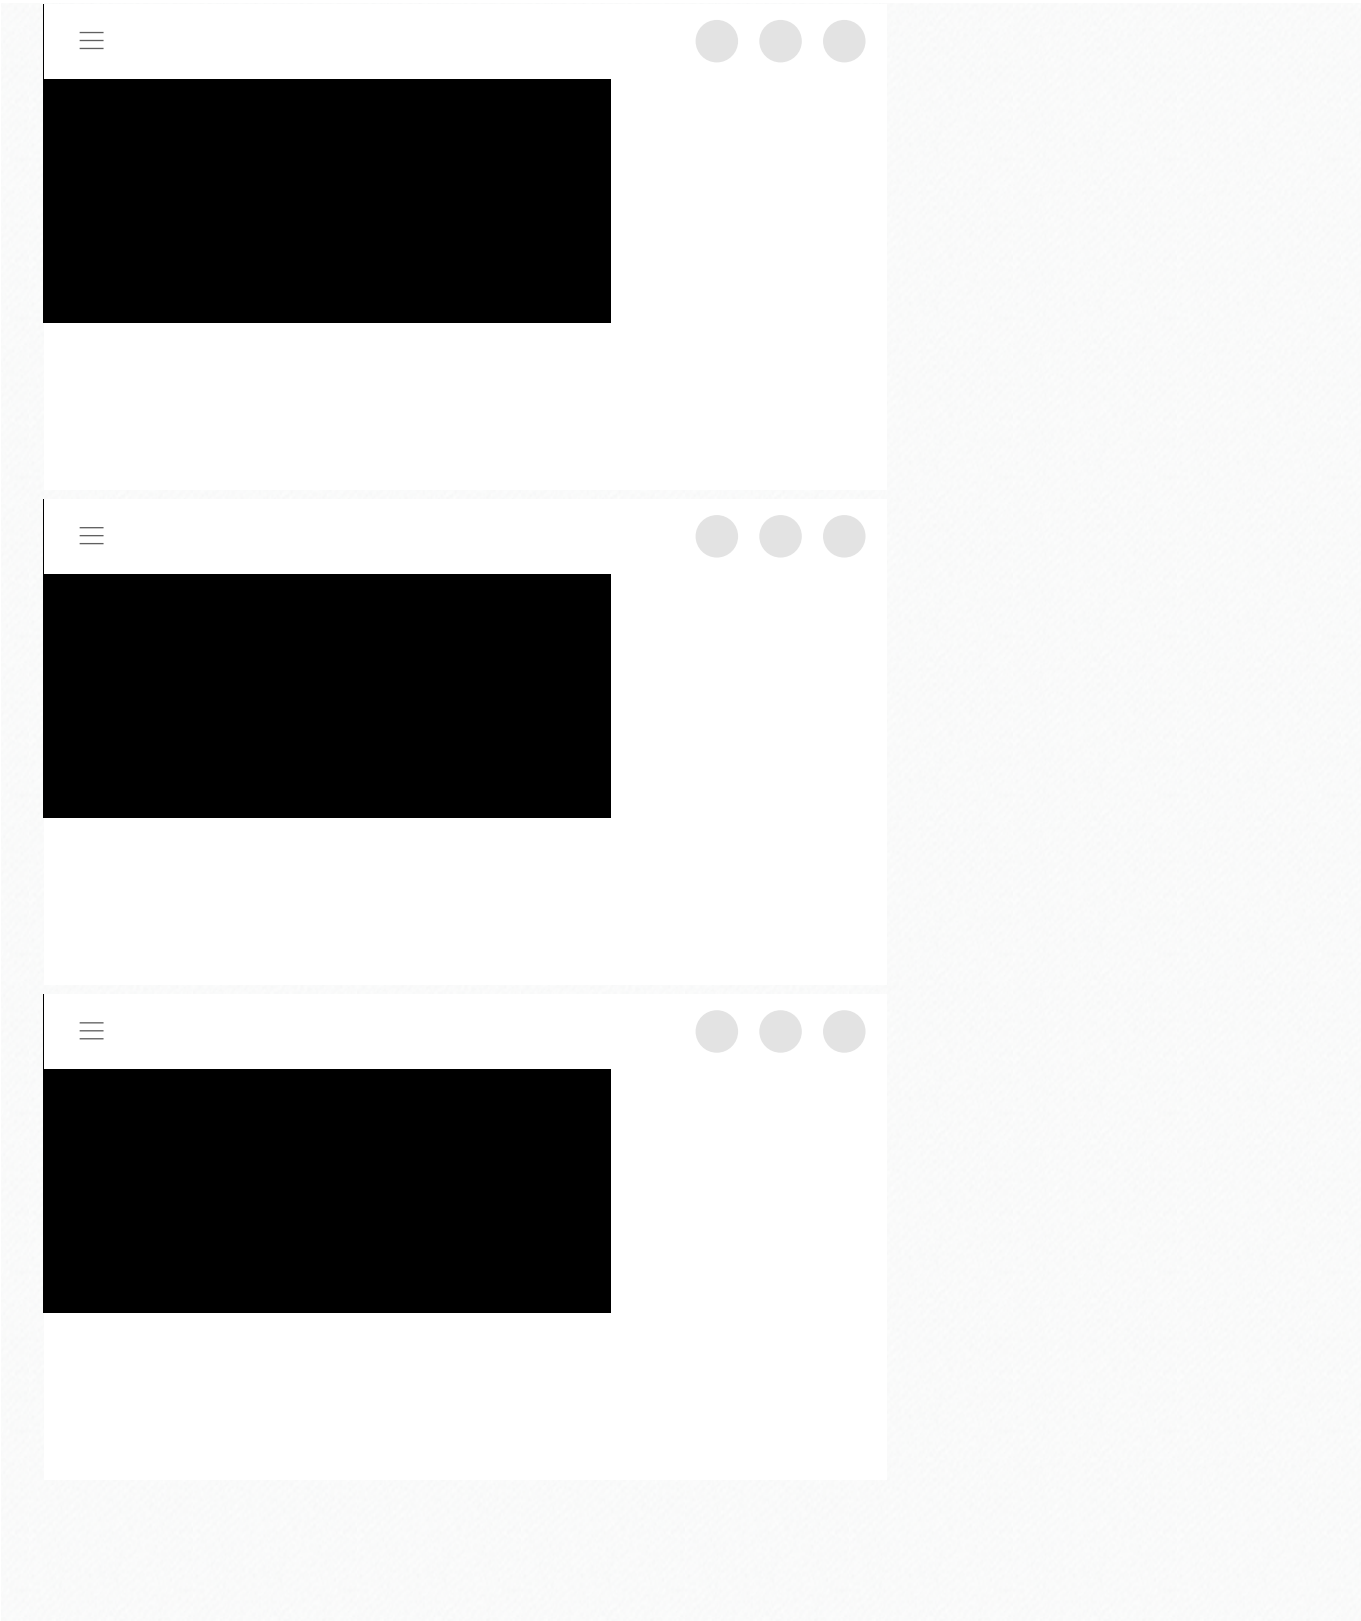

Can I breastfeed with the new Four Position 360 Carrier? How does that work?

Can I also use the Four Position 360 Carrier from birth on?

Up to what age can and should I carry my child in the Four Position 360 Carrier, and for how many hours a day?

Why do I need the Infant Insert and how long do I need to use it?
