May. 17, 2023	43	ORDER denying Plaintiff's 17 Motion for Temporary Restraining Order; granting Order to Show Cause. The Court DENIES Plaintiff's motion for a TRO but GRANTS Plaintiff's request for an order to show cause as to why a preliminary injunction should not issue. The Court will set a preliminary-injunction briefing schedule and preliminary-injunction hearing by separate order. The Court also DENIES Defendant's Motion for Leave to File Surreply to Plaintiff's Supplemental Briefing Addressing the Jurisdictional Issue. See Dkt. # 42 . Defendant may further address the jurisdictional issue in the preliminary-injunction briefing. Signed by Judge John H. Chun. (SB) (Entered: 05/17/2023)
Motion/Application for Preliminary Injunction		Additional briefing ordered
Declaratory Judgment Actions L Substantial Controversy L Cases Finding Substantial Controversy		The court denied plaintiff's motion for a TRO but granted plaintiff's request for a show cause order regarding a preliminary injunction and determined that the court had jurisdiction over this declaratory judgment action. "[A]s Plaintiff explained in its supplemental brief, any jurisdictional confusion stems from the fact that Plaintiff recently changed its English name. 'Plaintiff changed its English name from "Shenzhen Root E-Commerce Co., Ltd." to "Shenzhen Root Technology Co., Ltd.," and both names refer to the same entity—Plaintiff.' Accordingly, at this stage, the Court is satisfied that it possesses jurisdiction: There appears to be an actual controversy between Plaintiff and Defendant, even if Plaintiff has done business under various English names. So long as the various names refer to the same corporate entity, there does not seem to be a jurisdictional issue."
Motion/Application for Temporary Restraining Order		Denied
TRO & Preliminary Injunction L Enjoined Activity L Precluding Patent Enforcement District Court Procedural Issues L TRO & Preliminary Injunction L Irreparable Harm		The court denied the declaratory judgment plaintiff's motion for a TRO requiring defendant to withdraw its infringement complaints to Amazon and found that plaintiff failed to show irreparable harm. "Aside from ordinary lost-revenue concerns (which could perhaps be compensable through money damages, Plaintiff has not demonstrated that the harms asserted are so immediate and irreparable that they will occur in the period between this order and a future preliminary-injunction hearing. Indeed, Plaintiff filed this motion two weeks after its products were delisted, suggesting that the "imminence" of the harm alleged is not measured in hours or days. And here, issuance of a TRO would require Defendant to take affirmative action by withdrawing its infringement allegations with Amazon. The Court prefers to further evaluate these (and other) arguments at the preliminary-injunction stage, when the Court will have the benefit of a hearing and more thorough briefing."
Motion to File Sur-Reply or Additional Brief		Denied

Jun. 13, 2023	59	ORDER denying Defendant's 53 MOTION for Reconsideration. Signed by Judge John H. Chun. (SB) (Entered: 06/13/2023)
Motion to Reconsider - Motion/Application for Temporary Restraining Order		Denied
TRO & Preliminary Injunction L Enjoined Activity L Precluding Patent Enforcement District Court Procedural Issues L Motion Practice in General L Reconsideration District Court Procedural Issues L TRO & Preliminary Injunction L Likelihood Of Success		After the court denied the declaratory judgment plaintiff's motion for a TRO requiring defendant to take down its Amazon complaints, the court denied defendant's motion for reconsideration of the tentative finding that plaintiff was ultimately likely to prevail on the merits. "According to Defendant, Plaintiff provided Amazon a copy of the Court's order shortly after it was issued. Based on that order, Amazon re-listed [Plaintiff's] products. . . . To be sure, the Court agrees with Defendant that its decision was based on briefing provided by Defendant on a rushed timeline, and that its merits determination is—as the order states—at most 'tentative.' Any third parties are welcome to take such factors into consideration when reading the Court's order. But the Court does not believe that the actions of either Plaintiff or Amazon justify reconsideration. . . . If Defendant believes it will be irreparably harmed by Plaintiff's alleged infringement, it may seek whatever relief it deems proper. But it does not justify reconsideration of Plaintiff's motion."
Motion to Reconsider - Motion/Application for Temporary Restraining Order		Denied
TRO & Preliminary Injunction L Enjoined Activity L Precluding Patent Enforcement District Court Procedural Issues L Motion Practice in General L Reconsideration		After the court denied the declaratory judgment plaintiff's motion for a TRO requiring defendant to take down its Amazon complaints, the court denied defendant's motion for reconsideration of the tentative finding of jurisdiction. "The Court is, as always, interested in ensuring that it possesses jurisdiction over the proceeding. But while some of the facts raised by Defendants are troubling, they do not alter the Court's conclusion that ' at this stage , the Court is satisfied that it possesses jurisdiction.' If Defendant believes the Court lacks jurisdiction, it may argue as such in a proper motion of its own alleging lack of jurisdiction."

		Motion to Amend or Supplement Pleading	Granted
		District Court Procedural Issues L Pleadings L Amendment of Pleadings District Court Procedural Issues L Scheduling/Pretial Orders L Modification of Scheduling Order	The court granted defendant's motion to amend its counterclaims and rejected plaintiff's request to extend the schedule by eleven months and found that defendant did not unduly delay seeking amendment. "The record and the briefing on this motion demonstrate that [Defendant] forecast its intention to amend its counterclaim in the manner it now requests. [Defendant] moved promptly for leave to amend after the new patents were issued, and any delay is attributable to [Plaintiff] providing admittedly inaccurate information during the discovery process. Although [Plaintiff] opposes [Defendant's] motion on grounds of delay, the Court finds that this factor does not support denying the motion."
		Motion to Amend or Supplement Pleading	Granted
		District Court Procedural Issues L Pleadings L Amendment of Pleadings District Court Procedural Issues L Scheduling/Pretial Orders L Modification of Scheduling Order	The court granted defendant's motion to amend its counterclaims and rejected plaintiff's request to extend the schedule by eleven months and found that amendment would not cause undue prejudice. "[A] continuance of the case schedule alone (assuming that one is needed) does not constitute substantial prejudice that outweighs the need for amendment, particularly at this relatively early stage in the proceedings. And to the extent that [Plaintiff] raises concerns about the time [Defendant] will need to serve [a newly added party] under the Hague Convention, this concern is largely in [Plaintiff's] control to remedy if it allows its current counsel to accept service for [the new party], as noted by [Defendant]. In any event, modifications to the case schedule necessitated by amendment may be addressed in a future motion to modify the case schedule, but the Court declines to rule on that issue in the context of a motion for leave to amend."
