EX2021	USPTO’s October 17, 2025 Proposed Rules, 90 Fed. Reg. 48335 (Oct. 17, 2025)

Patent Owner (“PO”) submits this Reply to support its request that the Director deny institution in view of three developments. First, the district court in the co-pending Litigation has entered a scheduling order, suggesting that trial will occur earlier than originally expected and, in any event, before the Board issues a FWD. Second, newly revealed documents show that Petitioner’s senior executives not only knew of, but analyzed, the challenged patent family approximately seven years ago, which further emphasizes Petitioner’s concealment in the Litigation and bolsters PO’s settled expectations. Third, the USPTO’s recent Notice of Proposed Rulemaking further highlights that institution is improper because Petitioner’s Sotera stipulation does not bar validity attacks in the Litigation. These recent developments confirm that the Director should deny institution.

I. THE DISTRICT COURT’S SCHEDULE CONFIRMS THAT THE TRIAL WILL PREDATE A FINAL WRITTEN DECISION.

When PO filed its opening brief, the district court in the Litigation had not yet entered a scheduling order. PO therefore relied on the parties’ proposed schedule to approximate a trial date. (Paper 7 at 15-16.) Based on the proposed schedule, PO expected trial to occur in January 2027, around the same time as the projected FWD deadline of January 21, 2027. (Id.) The district court’s recent October 8, 2025 Schedule (EX1052) suggests an earlier trial date. The Schedule sets a Markman hearing date of February 5, 2026, more than a month earlier than that originally projected by PO. (EX1052, ¶ 6; Paper 7 at 15-16.)¹ Carrying that forward based on the Schedule, dispositive motion briefing will be complete by October 1, 2026. Assuming a conservative three-month gap between the completion of dispositive motion / Daubert briefing and trial (see EX1052, ¶¶ 3, 7, 9, 10; Paper 7 at 16), PO expects that trial will now occur no later than January 1, 2027, i.e., at least several weeks before the projected FWD date.

Tellingly, Petitioner's response focuses on average time to trial statistics, but ignores the actual Litigation Schedule, which Petitioner had the benefit of considering in its response. (Paper 10 at 3-4.) By relying on averages, Petitioner would have the Director believe that trial will occur no sooner than one year after dispositive motion and Daubert briefing is complete, and possibly more than three years later. (Paper 10 at 3-4.) Of course, Petitioner fails to identify any reason for such delay. Ultimately, the Schedule confirms that the district court will resolve validity challenges first. This development supports discretionary denial.

II. NEW EMAILS SHOW THAT PETITIONER'S UPPER MANAGEMENT ANALYZED THE CHALLENGED PATENT FAMILY YEARS AGO, REINFORCING PATENT OWNER'S SETTLED EXPECTATIONS AND PETITIONER'S CONCEALMENT.

Recently produced emails between Petitioner and a third-party patent broker

strengthen PO's settled expectations to the challenged patents. Specifically, these emails demonstrate that Petitioner's upper management analyzed the challenged patent family in 2018–2019 but never attempted to invalidate it. From the get-go, Petitioner intended to put the patents and applications before its most senior officers, including its CEO and CTO, for analysis and consideration. (EX2001 at 1 (“you mentioned you wanted to circle back with your CTO, Phil Keslin, and CEO, John Hanke”); EX2019 at 1 (“Let me follow up with our CTO this week.”).) As promised, Petitioner emailed the patent broker to confirm that Petitioner's CTO had begun to analyze the challenged patent family and would share the results with Petitioner's executive team:

I met with our CTO [Phil Keslin] today. He has started reviewing the patents but has a number of things on his plate at the moment. In terms of process, he is the key guy to help us evaluate and will then share his perspective with the rest of our exec team.

(EX2020 at 1.) Considered collectively, these emails show that Petitioner's most senior officers, including its CTO and CEO, were involved in the analysis of, and decision not to purchase, the challenged patent family almost seven years ago.

These newly produced emails reinforce that this IPR is a strategic afterthought that would undermine PO's settled expectations if instituted. These emails demonstrate not only Petitioner's awareness but, critically, its substantive engagement with the patent family it now seeks to challenge. Despite this prior analysis, Petitioner elected not to purchase the portfolio or to question its validity until filing this IPR. This deliberate inaction underscores that Petitioner's IPR is a litigation tactic rather than a response to any genuine validity concern. The Director should not permit Petitioner to avail itself of the IPR process now when Petitioner analyzed the patent family years earlier and could have sought review over the last half decade. Importantly, PO relied on Petitioner's inaction, expecting that a sophisticated entity that analyzed and declined to challenge the patents would not later attack their validity. Petitioner's analysis of the challenged patent family strengthens PO's settled expectations and weighs against institution.

That Petitioner concealed these new documents in the Litigation also favors discretionary denial. Petitioner withheld its internal and third-party communications regarding its prior knowledge and analysis of the challenged patent family until after PO submitted its initial discretionary denial brief.² Petitioner's conduct suggests that the petition is not a good-faith effort to challenge validity, but a calculated attempt to undermine PO's settled expectations and avoid a discretionary denial.

III. PETITIONER'S LIMITED STIPULATION ALSO FAVORS DENIAL BECAUSE IT IS INCONSISTENT WITH THE USPTO'S OCTOBER 17, 2025, PROPOSED RULES AND CURRENT POLICY.

Petitioner's stipulation falls well short of the USPTO's proposed rule, which favors discretionary denial. The USPTO's October 17, 2025, proposed rules generally mandate IPR denial when a petitioner does not agree to forego all 102 and 103 validity challenges in parallel district court litigation:

² Petitioner has not authorized PO to submit Petitioner's internal emails as exhibits in this IPR, further concealing such documents and impeding the Board's ability to consider evidence directly bearing on the settled expectations factor.

Under the proposed revisions, this section would provide that the Office will not institute an IPR when a petitioner intends to pursue invalidity challenges under §§ 102 or 103 in other venues, such as district court This proposed section would further require the Petitioner to file the stipulation in any other venue where it is litigating with the patent owner. The Office's view is that this requirement would promote fairness and efficiency by channeling similar patent challenges to a single forum and ensure that IPRs should generally serve as a complete substitute for at least some phase of the litigation.

(EX2021 at 4 (internal quotations and citations omitted), 7.)³ Petitioner's stipulation does not preclude it from continuing to litigate prior art invalidity defenses in district court. (EX1050 (expressly limited to the estoppel under 35 U.S.C. § 315(e)(2).) Under the USPTO's proposed rule, Petitioner's limited Sotera-style stipulation requires denial of institution. Even without adoption, the proposed rule reflects current USPTO policy that disfavors institution where, as here, the Petitioner failed to commit to challenging validity in one forum. Either way, this development favors denial.

IV. CONCLUSION

For these additional reasons, the Director should deny institution.
