Maxell’s identification of the Accused Instrumentalities is based on information reasonably available to Maxell at this time. Maxell reserves the right to supplement these Infringement Contentions based on information developed in the course of this lawsuit through discovery or additional factual investigation, in view of the Court’s claim construction rulings, or as other circumstances may require. Specifically, should discovery reveal that Samsung has committed acts of infringement related to any products other than those listed above, including newly released products or additional products with similar functionality identified in Appendices 1-10, Maxell reserves the right to supplement these contentions.

C. P.R. 3-1(c): Claim Charts

Pursuant to P.R. 3-1(c), and based on the information presently available, Maxell attaches hereto the following Appendices 1-10 identifying specifically where each element of each asserted claim is found within the Accused Instrumentalities: Appendix 1 (the ’088 Patent), Appendix 2 (the ’650 Patent), Appendix 3 (the ’417 Patent), Appendix 4 (the ’198 Patent), Appendix 5 (the ’091 Patent), Appendix 6 (the ’645 Patent), Appendix 7 (the ’950 Patent), Appendix 8 (the ’228 Patent), Appendix 9 (the ’646 Patent), and Appendix 10 (the ’681 Patent). Additionally, Appendix 11 provides evidence of infringing functionalities and components for all of the Accused Instrumentalities as addressed in Appendices 1-10. Each of these appendices identifies a claim chart for the asserted claims of the patents-in-suit and the Accused Instrumentalities. As explained below, the Samsung Accused Instrumentalities infringe based on the functionalities and infringement theories set forth in Appendices 1-10 for each of the corresponding patents-in-suit.

Further, Appendix 11 supports the contention that each of the Accused Instrumentalities infringe under the same infringement theories as shown in Appendices 1-10 at least because the Accused Instrumentalities each have similar hardware components, similar operating system, similar Samsung applications, and/or similar accused functionalities as shown in Appendices 1-10. For example, as excerpted in Appendices 1-10, Samsung's own user manuals, web pages, and answer pages describe the Accused functionalities in the same manner across the Accused Instrumentalities providing additional basis for Maxell's contention that the Accused Instrumentalities infringe under the same infringement theories as shown in Appendices 1-10. See e.g.:

1. The '088 Patent and Appendix 1

With respect to the '088 Patent, Appendix 1 shows how each element of claims 1 and 14 is found in the Accused Samsung '088 Products.

As shown in Appendix 1, the Accused Samsung '088 Products have the ability to be a node in a SmartThings network. Each of the Accused Samsung '088 Products is one of a plurality of network devices connectable to a network based on being a node within the SmartThings ecosystem. See <https://www.smarththings.com/>. Further, each of the '088 Accused Products with a display (e.g., Galaxy smartphones, tablets, laptops, hub refrigerators, and watches) are an example of a communication device that is configured to control how to display data received from a second communication terminal (e.g., SmartThings appliances and/or Galaxy smartphones, tablets, laptops, and watches) providing events, notifications, Favorites modifications, health check, device status, diagnostics, and/or device on boarding information. Further, each of the '088 Accused Products used for onboarding (e.g., Galaxy smartphones, tablets, laptops, watches, SmartThings cloud, Hub refrigerator) provide an example of a first communication terminal configured to connect to a communication device via an access point device, transmit a command to remotely control a display operation on the communication device, and/or providing permission to the second communication terminal to establish a connection with the communication device as part of onboarding.

See <https://developer.smarthings.com/docs/devices/cloud-connected/get-started>

Further, Samsung's SmartThings requirements dictates that each of the '088 Accused Products implement certain "Interaction Types," as noted below.

Interaction Types

The interaction type is located in the payload `headers.interactionType`. The token context for the request is indicated in `authentication.token`.

For WWST approval, you must implement the following SmartThings interaction types:

- `discoveryRequest`: SmartThings requests a list of devices. Automatic polling occurs every ~24 hours. The Discovery request is followed by the State Refresh request.
- `stateRefreshRequest`: SmartThings requests the states of the indicated devices.
- `commandRequest`: SmartThings requests that you issue commands for the indicated devices.
- Callbacks allow your Cloud Connector to push a device's state to SmartThings:
 - Reciprocal Access Token Callbacks: Receive and refresh access tokens for use with a Callback interaction. Consists of the following interaction types:
 - `grantCallbackAccess`: Originates from SmartThings. Involved in initial token exchange.
 - `accessTokenRequest`: Originates from your Cloud Connector. Involved in initial token exchange.
 - `accessTokenResponse`: Originates from SmartThings. Involved in initial token exchange + refreshing the SmartThings token.
 - `refreshAccessTokens`: Originates from your Cloud Connector. Involved in refreshing the SmartThings token.
 - `stateCallback` is used by your Cloud Connector to update the state of a device that changed as a result of an interaction that did not originate from SmartThings.
 - `discoveryCallback` allows your Cloud Connector to perform on-demand discovery.
- `interactionResult` notifies you of where issues were found in the response on a request from SmartThings Schema.
- `integrationDeleted` notifies you when a connected service is deleted.
- Error Responses can be appended with `globalError` or `deviceError` in your interaction type response.

See <https://developer.smarthings.com/docs/devices/cloud-connected/interaction-types/>.

Further, as shown in Appendices 1 and 11, technical specifications show that each of the Accused Samsung '088 Products include all necessary hardware, operating systems, and software required by each of claims 1 and 14. For example, each of the Accused Samsung '088 Products has the ability to be a node in a SmartThings network. Thus, each of the Accused Samsung '088 Products infringes based on the same theories as shown in Appendix 1 because they include the same components and implement the same functionalities of SmartThings as shown in Appendix 1.

Samsung has indirectly infringed at least claims 1 and 14 of the '088 Patent, by, among other things, contributing to the direct infringement of others, including customers of the '088 Accused Products by making, offering to sell, or selling, in the United States, or importing a component of a patented machine, manufacture, or combination, or an apparatus for use in practicing a patented process, constituting a material part of the invention, knowing the same to be especially made or especially adapted for use in infringement of the '088 Patent, and not a staple article or commodity of commerce suitable for substantial non-infringing use.

For example, the '088 Accused Products include hardware and software for implementing SmartThings functionality. These are components of a patented machine, manufacture, or combination, or an apparatus for use in practicing a patented process. Furthermore, these components are a material part of the invention and upon information and belief are not a staple article or commodity of commerce suitable for substantial non-infringing use. Thus, Samsung is liable for infringement of the '088 Patent pursuant to 35 U.S.C. § 271(c).

Samsung has been on notice of the '088 Patent since, at least, December 29, 2021, based on correspondence directed to Mr. Daejin Jeon of SEC's IP Center from Mr. T. Yamamoto of Maxell. That correspondence set forth Maxell's belief that Samsung makes, uses, sells, offers to sell, or imports products that infringe certain of Maxell's patents, and specifically identified the '088 Patent as well as exemplary claims and exemplary accused products for that patent including SmartThings network. By the time of trial, Samsung will thus have known and intended (since receiving such notice), that its continued actions would actively induce and contribute to actual infringement of at least claims 1 and 14 of the '088 Patent.

Samsung undertook and continued its infringing actions despite an objectively high likelihood that such activities infringed the '088 Patent, which has been duly issued by the USPTO, and is presumed valid. For example, since at least December 29, 2021, Samsung has been aware of an objectively high likelihood that its actions constituted and continue to constitute infringement of the '088 Patent, and that the '088 Patent is valid. On information and belief, Samsung could not reasonably, subjectively believe that its actions do not constitute infringement of the '088 Patent, nor could it reasonably, subjectively believe that the patent is invalid. Despite that knowledge and subjective belief, and the objectively high likelihood that its actions constitute infringement, Samsung continued its infringing activities. As such, Samsung has willfully infringed and continues to willfully infringe the '088 Patent.

Alternatively, to the extent that Samsung argues any particular accused component or structure (e.g., a communication device, terminal, controller, or access point) does not literally meet a claim element, that element is nevertheless present under the doctrine of equivalents. The corresponding structure in the Accused Products performs substantially the same function, in substantially the same way, to achieve substantially the same result as the claimed element, such that any differences are insubstantial.

Further, while consumer use of the Accused Samsung '088 Products necessarily implicates SmartThings, physical control over SmartThings elements is not necessary for direct infringement. Nevertheless, Samsung alternatively contributes to the divided direct infringement by end consumers and SmartThings as consumers have paid Samsung for the ability to use SmartThings functionality with the Accused Samsung '088 Products at their direction by consumers' purchase of the Accused Samsung '088 Products, SmartThings is operated under the control and direction of Samsung, and the manner and timing of consumers' use of the onboarding and/or syncing functions of the SmartThings functionality of the Accused Samsung '088 Products is established by consumers.

2. The '650 Patent and Appendix 2

With respect to the '650 Patent, Appendix 2 shows how each element of claims 1 and 4 is found in the Accused Samsung '650 Products.

As shown in Appendix 2, the Accused Samsung '650 Products function as main and subsidiary terminals that exchange personalized content within a network. See <https://www.smarthings.com/>. Further, each of the '650 Accused Products include a storage (e.g., memory), a display, and a controller (e.g., CPU executing an operating system) that store content, e.g., “Events,” “Favorites list,” “Notifications,” or “My Devices,” such that, upon information and belief, the main terminal in the SmartThings network stores device identification information and association information for subsidiary terminals (e.g., identifiers and/or descriptive information associated with “Events,” “Favorites list,” “Notifications,” or “My Devices”) such that information is transmitted/received between the main and subsidiary terminals (e.g., providing events, notifications, Favorites modifications, health check, device status, diagnostics, and/or device onboarding information) and displayed on the subsidiary terminals. Further, the '650 Accused Products determine whether it is possible to connect to the subsidiary terminal as part of onboarding and/or as part of determining the status of the subsidiary terminal in the SmartThings network (e.g., online/offline).

See <https://developer.smartthings.com/docs/devices/cloud-connected/get-started>

Further, Samsung's SmartThings requirements dictates that each of the '650 Accused Products implement certain "Interaction Types," as noted below.

Interaction Types

The interaction type is located in the payload `headers.interactionType`. The token context for the request is indicated in `authentication.token`.

For WWST approval, you must implement the following SmartThings interaction types:

- `discoveryRequest`: SmartThings requests a list of devices. Automatic polling occurs every ~24 hours. The Discovery request is followed by the State Refresh request.
- `stateRefreshRequest`: SmartThings requests the states of the indicated devices.
- `commandRequest`: SmartThings requests that you issue commands for the indicated devices.
- Callbacks allow your Cloud Connector to push a device's state to SmartThings:
 - Reciprocal Access Token Callbacks: Receive and refresh access tokens for use with a Callback interaction. Consists of the following interaction types:
 - `grantCallbackAccess`: Originates from SmartThings. Involved in initial token exchange.
 - `accessTokenRequest`: Originates from your Cloud Connector. Involved in initial token exchange.
 - `accessTokenResponse`: Originates from SmartThings. Involved in initial token exchange + refreshing the SmartThings token.
 - `refreshAccessTokens`: Originates from your Cloud Connector. Involved in refreshing the SmartThings token.
 - `stateCallback` is used by your Cloud Connector to update the state of a device that changed as a result of an interaction that did not originate from SmartThings.
 - `discoveryCallback` allows your Cloud Connector to perform on-demand discovery.
- `interactionResult` notifies you of where issues were found in the response on a request from SmartThings Schema.
- `integrationDeleted` notifies you when a connected service is deleted.
- Error Responses can be appended with `globalError` or `deviceError` in your interaction type response.

See <https://developer.smartthings.com/docs/devices/cloud-connected/interaction-types/>

Further, as shown in Appendices 2 and 11, technical specifications show that each of the Accused Samsung '650 Products include all necessary hardware, operating systems, and software required by each of claims 1 and 4 of the '650 Patent. For example, each of the Accused Samsung '650 Products include a main terminal (e.g., a Galaxy smartphone or Family Hub refrigerator) with a storage, a display, and a first controller, and a plurality of subsidiary terminals (e.g., a Galaxy watch or another smart appliance) with a second display and a second controller, where the main terminal stores device specific ID information and association information to transmit specific content to a specific subsidiary terminal that has been connected and authenticated. See, e.g., Appendices 2 and 11 (identifying the technical specifications of the Accused Samsung '650 Products confirming the same). Thus, each of the Accused Samsung '650 Products infringes based on the same theories as shown in Appendix 2 because they include the same components and implement the same functionalities when transmitting personalized content or device notifications from a main terminal to a subsidiary terminal within the SmartThings ecosystem as shown in Appendix 2.

Samsung has indirectly infringed at least claims 1 and 4 of the '650 Patent by, among other things, contributing to the direct infringement of others, including customers of the '650 Accused Products by making, offering to sell, or selling, in the United States, or importing a component of a patented machine, manufacture, or combination, or an apparatus for use in practicing a patented process, constituting a material part of the invention, knowing the same to be especially made or especially adapted for use in infringement of the '650 Patent, and not a staple article or commodity of commerce suitable for substantial non-infringing use.

3. The '417 Patent and Appendix 3

With respect to the '417 Patent, Appendix 3 shows how each element of claims 1-3, and 7 is found in the Accused Samsung '417 Products.

As shown in Appendix 3, the Accused Samsung '417 Products change their processor clock speeds to manage power consumption based on the device's operational state. As further shown in Appendix 3, each of the '417 Accused Products is a mobile terminal capable of being changed from an open condition to a closed condition and include a processor (e.g., CPU or Application Processor) which executes program processing and operates at different frequencies based on a variable clock signal. Further, each of the '417 Accused Products includes a clock controller capable of changing a frequency of a clock signal to be fed to the processor (e.g., clock circuitry external or internal to the CPU). Further, the clock circuitry in each of the '417 Accused Products controls the frequency of the clock signal so as to become a first frequency when the mobile terminal is in the open condition, and controls the frequency of the clock signal so as to become a second frequency lower than the first frequency when the mobile terminal is in the closed condition. Further, the clock circuitry in each of the '417 Accused Product controls the frequency of the clock signal so as to become a frequency higher than the second frequency when a specific processing is executed even if the mobile terminal is in the closed condition, and controls the frequency of the clock signal so as to become the second frequency after the execution of the specific processing is completed. For example, each of the '417 Accused Products include a camera to execute a specific processing of image decoding while in closed condition.

The following exemplary disclosure from webpages provided by Samsung provide evidence that each of the Accused Samsung '417 Products can be used to perform specific processing of imaging decoding using the Camera application in each of the Accused Samsung '417 Products:

Camera modes and settings on Galaxy phones and tablets

The cameras on Galaxy phones and tablets come with a variety of shooting modes and camera settings that make it easy to capture and add flair to your pictures and videos. AR Doodle, Super slow-mo, Director's view, and Portrait mode are just a few of the options the camera has to offer. You can take things a step further by adjusting the camera's available settings, such as changing the video size or adding grid lines.

Selfies

- Use wide angle for group selfies: Automatically switches to wide-angle when there are two or more people in the selfie.
- Save selfies as previewed: Save selfies as they appear in the preview without flipping them.
- Selfie color tone: Set the color tone for your selfies to Natural or Bright.

Further, as shown in Appendices 3 and 11, technical specifications show that each of the Accused Samsung '417 Products include all necessary hardware, operating systems, and software required by each of claims 1-3 and 7 of the '417 Patent. For example, each of the Accused Samsung '417 Products include a processor (e.g., an Application Processor), and a clock controller that changes the frequency of a clock signal fed to the processor to a first frequency in an open condition, a lower second frequency in a closed condition, and a frequency higher than the second frequency when a specific processing (e.g., image decoding) is executed while the terminal is in the closed condition. See, e.g., Appendices 3 and 11 (identifying the technical specifications of the Accused Samsung '417 Products confirming the same). Thus, each of the Accused Samsung '417 Products infringes based on the same theories as shown in Appendix 3 because they include the same components and implement the same functionalities when performing processor-intensive tasks like using the camera while the device is in a standby or closed state as shown in Appendix 3.

Samsung has indirectly infringed at least claims 1-3 and 7 of the '417 Patent by, among other things, contributing to the direct infringement of others, including customers of the '417 Accused Products by making, offering to sell, or selling, in the United States, or importing a component of a patented machine, manufacture, or combination, or an apparatus for use in practicing a patented process, constituting a material part of the invention, knowing the same to be especially made or especially adapted for use in infringement of the '417 Patent, and not a staple article or commodity of commerce suitable for substantial non-infringing use.

For example, the '417 Accused Products include hardware and software for implementing one or more clock controllers capable of changing a frequency for specific processes. These are components of a patented machine, manufacture, or combination, or an apparatus for use in practicing a patented process. Furthermore, these components are a material part of the invention and upon information and belief are not a staple article or commodity of commerce suitable for substantial non-infringing use. Thus, Samsung is liable for infringement of the '417 Patent pursuant to 35 U.S.C. § 271(c).

Samsung has been on notice of the '417 Patent since, at least, July 7, 2021, based on correspondence directed to Mr. I. Lee of SEC from Mr. T. Yamamoto of Maxell. See Letter from T. Yamamoto to I. Lee dated July 7, 2021. That correspondence sets forth Maxell's belief that Samsung makes, uses, sells, offers to sell, or imports products that infringe certain of Maxell's patents, and specifically identified the '417 Patent as well as exemplary claims and exemplary accused products for that patent including SmartThings network. By the time of trial, Samsung will thus have known and intended (since receiving such notice) that its continued actions would actively induce and contribute to actual infringement of at least claims 1-3 and 7 of the '417 Patent.

Despite that knowledge and subjective belief, and the objectively high likelihood that its actions constitute infringement, Samsung continued its infringing activities. As such, Samsung has willfully infringed and continues to willfully infringe the '417 Patent.

Alternatively, to the extent that Samsung argues any particular accused component or structure (e.g., a processor or clock controller) does not literally meet a claim element, that element is nevertheless present under the doctrine of equivalents. The corresponding structure in the Accused Products performs substantially the same function, in substantially the same way, to achieve substantially the same result as the claimed element, such that any differences are insubstantial.

4. The '198 Patent and Appendix 4

With respect to the '198 Patent, Appendix 4 shows how each element of claims 1 and 4 are found in the in the Accused Samsung '198 Products.

As shown in Appendix 4, the Accused Samsung '198 Products automatically create playlists and albums by grouping digital images based on shared characteristics. Products each include a display, processor, and various programs including applications that infringe at least claims 1 and 4 of the '198 Patent. For example, upon information and belief, each of the '198 Accused Products are sold with Netflix and Gallery applications. See

<https://techcrunch.com/2020/02/13/netflix-fends-off-new-streaming-rivals-by-way-of-samsung-partnership/?guccounter=1#:~:text=At%20Samsung's%20Unpacked%20event%20this,streaming%20service%20with%20Samsung%20devices;> see also

<https://www.samsung.com/us/support/answer/ANS00079026/>. Each of the '198 Accused Products includes a playlist generation function with a recommendation engine that provides an enhanced playlist generation function. See <https://help.netflix.com/en/node/100639>. Similarly, each of the '198 Accused Products executes a face-recognition process and includes a Samsung Gallery application that registers albums for specific person based on the face-recognition and generates an “Auto-updating albums” to generate an enhanced playlist. See <https://www.samsung.com/us/support/answer/ANS10002535/>.

The following exemplary disclosures from webpages provided by Samsung provide evidence of the '198 Accused Products infringing at least claims 1 and 4 of the '198 Patent:

Use the Gallery app on your Galaxy phone or tablet

Leave that bulky photo album at home and use your Galaxy phone or tablet instead to relive all those precious memories. With the Gallery app, you can view, edit, and manage your pictures, videos, and albums right on your Galaxy device.

<https://www.samsung.com/us/support/answer/ANS00079026/>

- 1 From Gallery, tap the Albums tab, and then tap Add (the plus sign). You can select from the following album types:

- Album: Create a standard album.
- Auto-updating album: Create an album that will automatically update to include pictures of people that you select.
- Group: Create a group, and then add albums to the group. You can view the next section for more information.

<https://www.samsung.com/us/support/answer/ANS00079026/>

You can prevent the Gallery app from automatically organizing your photos into new albums and stories. Although this option can be helpful if you have a lot of similar photos, you can still turn it off if you'd rather not use it.

- 1 Navigate to and open the Gallery app, and then make sure you are on the Pictures tab.
- 2 Tap More options (the three vertical dots), and then tap Ungroup similar images. This will prevent the Gallery app from automatically organizing your pictures.

- 3 If available, you can also tap the Similar images icon (the square in the top right corner) to disable image grouping. The icon will be black when disabled. However, this icon may not be available on certain models.

Further, as shown in Appendices 4 and 11, technical specifications show that each of the Accused Samsung '198 Products include all necessary hardware, operating systems, and software required by each of claims 1 and 4 of the '198 Patent. For example, each of the Accused Samsung '198 Products include an output module (a display) and a control module which selects a digital image to add to a playlist based on related information (e.g., a recognized face) and automatically identifies and retrieves additional digital images whose related information is the same as the selected digital image to be output in the playlist. See, e.g., Appendices 4 and 11 (identifying the technical specifications of the Accused Samsung '198 Products confirming the same). Thus, each of the Accused Samsung '198 Products infringes based on the same theories as shown in Appendix 4 because they include the same components and implement the same functionalities when using the Gallery application to create auto-updating albums based on face recognition as shown in Appendix 4.

Samsung has indirectly infringed at least claims 1 and 4 of the '198 Patent, by, among other things, contributing to the direct infringement of others, including customers of the '198 Accused Products by making, offering to sell, or selling, in the United States, or importing a component of a patented machine, manufacture, or combination, or an apparatus for use in practicing a patented process, constituting a material part of the invention, knowing the same to be especially made or especially adapted for use in infringement of the '198 Patent, and not a staple article or commodity of commerce suitable for substantial non-infringing use.

For example, the '198 Accused Products each include hardware and software for implementing playlist generation, recommendation engine, and dubbing functions by Samsung Gallery and/or Netflix application. These are components of a patented machine, manufacture, or combination, or an apparatus for use in practicing a patented process. Furthermore, these components are a material part of the invention and upon information and belief are not a staple article or commodity of commerce suitable for substantial non-infringing use. Thus, Samsung is liable for infringement of the '198 Patent pursuant to 35 U.S.C. § 271(c).

Samsung has been on notice of the '198 Patent since, at least, July 7, 2021, based on correspondence directed to Mr. I. Lee of SEC from Mr. T. Yamamoto of Maxell. See Letter from T. Yamamoto to I. Lee dated July 7, 2021. This correspondence sets forth Maxell's belief that Samsung makes, uses, sells, offers to sell, or imports products that infringe certain of Maxell's patents, and specifically identified the '198 Patent as well as exemplary claims and exemplary accused products for that patent. By the time of trial, Samsung will thus have known and intended (since receiving such notice), that its continued actions would actively induce and contribute to actual infringement of at least claims 1 and 4 of the '198 Patent by preinstalling Netflix application on the Accused Samsung '198 Products and/or by contributing or inducing users to download Netflix application at setup.

Samsung undertook and continued its infringing actions despite an objectively high likelihood that such activities infringed the '198 Patent, which has been duly issued by the USPTO, and is presumed valid. For example, since at least July 7, 2021, Samsung has been aware of an objectively high likelihood that its actions constituted and continue to constitute infringement of the '198 Patent, and that the '198 Patent is valid. On information and belief, Samsung could not reasonably, subjectively believe that its actions do not constitute infringement of the '198 Patent, nor could it reasonably, subjectively believe that the '198 Patent is invalid. Despite that knowledge and subjective belief, and the objectively high likelihood that its actions constitute infringement, Samsung continued its infringing activities. As such, Samsung has willfully infringed and continues to willfully infringe the '198 Patent.

Alternatively, to the extent that Samsung argues any particular accused component or structure (e.g., an output module or control module) does not literally meet a claim element, that element is nevertheless present under the doctrine of equivalents. The corresponding structure in the Accused Products performs substantially the same function, in substantially the same way, to achieve substantially the same result as the claimed element, such that any differences are insubstantial.

5. The '091 Patent and Appendix 5

With respect to the '091 Patent, Appendix 5 shows how each element of claims 1-3, 6, 7, 10, 13-17, and 20 is found in the in the Accused Samsung '091 Products.

As shown in Appendix 5, As shown in Appendix 5, the Accused Samsung '091 Products display different user operation panels depending on the type of content being played. Each of the '091 Accused Products includes network communication circuitry (e.g., Wi-Fi chipset and cellular modem) that received digital content from a server (e.g., Samsung TV server and/or Netflix server). Further, each of the '091 Accused Products includes a decoder (e.g., video decoder and/or codecs) to decode digital content, a display, and a controller that work in conjunction with various programs including applications that infringe at least claim 1 of the '091 Patent. For example, upon information and belief, each of the '091 Accused Products is sold with Samsung TV and Netflix application. See <https://techcrunch.com/2020/02/13/netflix-fends-off-new-streaming-rivals-by-way-of-samsung-partnership/?guccounter=1#:~:text=At%20Samsung's%20Unpacked%20event%20this,streaming%20service%20with%20Samsung%20devices; see also https://www.samsungtvplus.com/>. Each of the '091 Accused Products includes a controller that displays digital contents while generating specific user interfaces with interactive operation buttons during the time represented by the time related information, receiving user-instructions of interactive functions to the outside server (e.g., next episode function or functions to connect to Netflix or Samsung TV server for different language settings and/or to obtain additional information about the content being displayed). Further, each of the '091 Accused Products includes a controller that displays digital contents while generating specific user interfaces with linear operation buttons (e.g., fast forward, rewind, skip content etc.).

The following exemplary disclosures from webpages provided by Samsung provide evidence of the '091 Accused Products infringing at least claims 1-3, 6, 7, 10, 13-17, and 20 of the '091 Patent:

Further, as shown in Appendices 5 and 11, technical specifications show that each of the Accused Samsung '091 Products include all necessary hardware, operating systems, and software required by each of claims 1-3, 6, 7, 10, 13-17, and 20 of the '091 Patent. For example, each of the Accused Samsung '091 Products include network communication circuitry, a decoder, a display, and a controller that alternatively displays either a first operation panel with linear operation buttons (e.g., play/pause) or a second operation panel with interactive operation buttons (e.g., next episode) based on time-related information received with the digital content from an external server. See, e.g., Appendices 5 and 11 (identifying the technical specifications of the Accused Samsung '091 Products confirming the same). Thus, each of the Accused Samsung '091 Products infringes based on the same theories as shown in Appendix 5 because they include the same components and implement the same functionalities when streaming content via the Netflix or Samsung TV Plus applications as shown in Appendix 5.

Samsung has indirectly infringed at least claims 1-3, 6, 7, 10, 13-17, and 20 of the '091 Patent in this District and elsewhere in the United States by, among other things, actively inducing the use, offering for sale, selling, or importation of at least the '091 Accused Products. Samsung's customers who purchase devices and components thereof and operate such devices and components in accordance with Samsung's instructions directly infringe one or more claims of the '091 Patent in violation of 35 U.S.C. § 271. Samsung instructs its customers through at least user guides or websites, such as those located at:

Samsung is thereby liable for infringement of the '091 Patent pursuant to 35 U.S.C. § 271(b). Samsung has indirectly infringed at least claims 1-3, 6, 7, 10, 13-17, and 20 of the '091 Patent by, among other things, contributing to the direct infringement of others, including customers of the '091 Accused Products by making, offering to sell, or selling, in the United States, or importing a component of a patented machine, manufacture, or combination, or an apparatus for use in practicing a patented process, constituting a material part of the invention, knowing the same to be especially made or especially adapted for use in infringement of the '091 Patent, and not a staple article or commodity of commerce suitable for substantial non-infringing use.

For example, the '091 Accused Products each include hardware and software for implementing Samsung TV and/or Netflix application for receiving digital content, decoding digital content, displaying digital content, and rendering specific user interfaces with the digital content. These are components of a patented machine, manufacture, or combination, or an apparatus for use in practicing a patented process. Furthermore, these components are a material part of the invention and upon information and belief are not a staple article or commodity of commerce suitable for substantial non-infringing use. Thus, Samsung is liable for infringement of the '091 Patent pursuant to 35 U.S.C. § 271(c).

Samsung has been on notice of the '091 Patent since, at least, September 8, 2023, based on correspondence directed to Mr. D. Jeon from Mr. J. Beaver. This correspondence sets forth Maxell's belief that Samsung makes, uses, sells, offers to sell, or imports products that infringe certain of Maxell's patents, and specifically identified the allowed patent application that issued as the '091 Patent as well as exemplary allowed claims and exemplary accused products for that patent. By the time of trial, Samsung will thus have known and intended (since receiving this notice) that its continued actions would actively induce and contribute to actual infringement of at least claim 1 of the '091 Patent.

Samsung undertook and continued its infringing actions despite an objectively high likelihood that such activities infringed the '091 Patent, which has been duly issued by the USPTO, and is presumed valid. For example, since at least September 8, 2023, Samsung has been aware of an objectively high likelihood that its actions constituted and continue to constitute infringement of the '091 Patent, and that the '091 Patent is valid. On information and belief, Samsung could not reasonably, subjectively believe that its actions do not constitute infringement of the '091 Patent, nor could it reasonably, subjectively believe that the patent is invalid. Despite that knowledge and subjective belief, and the objectively high likelihood that its actions constitute infringement, Samsung continued its infringing activities. As such, Samsung has willfully infringed and continues to willfully infringe the '091 Patent.

Alternatively, to the extent that Samsung argues any particular accused component or structure (e.g., a controller, decoder, or operation panel) does not literally meet a claim element, that element is nevertheless present under the doctrine of equivalents. The corresponding structure in the Accused Products performs substantially the same function, in substantially the same way, to achieve substantially the same result as the claimed element, such that any differences are insubstantial.

6. The '645 Patent and Appendix 6

With respect to the '645 Patent, Appendix 6 shows how each element of claims 1-8 are found in the Accused Samsung '645 Products.

As shown in Appendix 6, the Accused Samsung '645 Products distinguish between a subject and its background to selectively apply video signal correction, including Portrait mode. As further shown in Appendix 6, each of the '645 Accused Products is observed to include an input unit to which a video signal is input. For example, each of the '645 Accused Products includes an image sensor and/or a cellular or Wi-Fi circuit for receiving a video signal. Further, each of the '645 Accused Products is observed to include a detector which detects whether pattern portions other than contents are contained in the video signal input to the input unit. For example, the '645 Accused Products include an image signal processor (ISP) and/or a CPU. The '645 Accused Products are further observed to include a corrector which corrects the video signal input to the input unit and a controller which controls the corrector to cause the corrector to correct the video signal input to the input unit when the pattern portions are not contained and which controls the corrector to cause the corrector not to correct the video signal when the pattern portions are contained. For example, in Portrait Mode, the '645 Accused Products do not perform certain color corrections to the pattern portions in Portrait mode, Motion photo (e.g., fireworks), Food mode, and Portrait video. Similarly, the '645 Accused Products do not perform certain corrections to the pattern portions when performing the scanning of documents, Portrait mode, Motion photo (e.g., fireworks), Food mode, and Portrait video. See, e.g., <https://www.samsung.com/us/support/answer/ANS10001377/>; see also <https://www.samsung.com/us/support/answer/ANS10003225/>; <https://www.samsung.com/us/support/answer/ANS00092489/>.

Capture the flavor with Food mode on your Galaxy phone or tablet

Foodies and aspiring food photographers, rejoice. Galaxy phones and tablets now have Food mode! Take pictures of your favorite dishes and put them in the spotlight. Food mode will automatically adjust the coloring to make your dishes look even more delicious. Bon appétit!

Don't hide a stunning dish from the camera. Give it the photographic justice it deserves!

- 1 Navigate to and open the Camera app, then tap MORE, and then tap FOOD. Make sure your dish is in the highlighted area.
- 2 To adjust the color temperature, tap the Quick controls icon (the four dots), then tap the Thermometer icon, and then adjust the slider at the bottom of the screen.
- 3 You can also tap the Blur effect icon (the teardrop) to blur the sides and background of your dish.
- 4 Then, tap Capture.

Use Portrait mode or Live Focus on your Galaxy phone

You know that Samsung's innovative cameras are fun to use and always include multiple options for getting your shots just right. The Live Focus feature has been a part of Galaxy phone cameras for a while and is known for its iconic filters. The original Live Focus is still great, but it has been added to Portrait mode on phones with One UI 4 and later software. With Portrait mode, you can use brand-new filters and effects to truly transform your selfies.

Portrait mode includes Live Focus and many additional effects and filters to take your pictures to the next level. Your selfies will look better than ever before!

Open the Camera app, then tap PORTRAIT, and then tap the circle in the bottom right of the viewfinder. The options can be altered using the slider. On some devices, PORTRAIT will be available at the bottom of the screen after opening the Camera app.

<https://www.samsung.com/us/support/answer/ANS10003225/>

- Blur: This will blur the background around the subject, like Live Focus on previous devices.
- Studio: This applies a brightening effect to the subject but does not brighten the background, making the subject the main focal point.
- High-key mono: Creates a monochromatic effect with a high brightness level. The entire picture and subject will appear in black and white.
- Low-key mono: Similar to High-key mono where the picture appears in black and white. However, it uses low brightness instead.
- Backdrop: Grays out the background around the subject with a gradient effect, while the subject itself still has color.
- Color point: Changes the sharpness of the colors directly around your subject, so everything else looks darker and the subject stands out.

<https://www.samsung.com/us/support/answer/ANS10003225/>

Although their names are different, Live focus video and Portrait video use the same options, whether you have a slightly older phone or a brand new Galaxy S24. Just like their picture alternatives, these modes add an effect to whatever you're recording using either the rear or front cameras.

Open the Camera app, and then tap MORE. Tap PORTRAIT VIDEO, and then tap the circle in the bottom right of the viewfinder. There are four options to choose from, and each can be altered using the slider.

- Blur: This will blur the background around the subject that you're filming.
- Big circle: Creates a focused circle around your subject while severely blurring the background.
- Color point: Changes the sharpness of the colors directly around your subject, so everything else becomes black and white.

<https://www.samsung.com/us/support/answer/ANS10003225/>

Scan and edit documents on your Galaxy phone or tablet

If you need to bring an important document with you but don't want to carry a heavy book or stack of files, you can scan and save the document using your Galaxy phone or tablet. Your device will create an exact replica of the document, so you'll always have access to it in your Gallery app when you need to view it. Your document can also be edited using the Samsung Notes app and exported as a PDF.

<https://www.samsung.com/us/support/answer/ANS10003225/>

Use the Gallery app to scan documents

Scanning a document, whether you're using a book or a piece of paper, will automatically remove unwanted shadows, hands, and other items that may be on the document itself. Scanning will also align rectangular shapes so your document will appear perfectly straight and legible. Once you're finished scanning, you can edit the document in the Samsung Notes app.

1. To begin, navigate to and open the Camera app on your phone or tablet, and then line up the viewfinder with the document.
2. Tap Scan when it appears. Your device will begin scanning the document.

Further, as shown in Appendices 6 and 11, technical specifications show that each of the Accused Samsung '645 Products include all necessary hardware, operating systems, and software required by each of claims 1-8 of the '645 Patent. For example, each of the Accused Samsung '645 Products include an input unit for a video signal, a detector (e.g., an ISP) which detects pattern portions other than contents (e.g., the background of a portrait), a corrector which corrects the video signal, and a controller which controls the corrector to not correct the video signal when the pattern portions are detected. See, e.g., Appendices 6 and 11 (identifying the technical specifications of the Accused Samsung '645 Products confirming the same). Thus, each of the Accused Samsung '645 Products infringes based on the same theories as shown in Appendix 6 because they include the same components and implement the same functionalities when using camera features like Portrait Mode as shown in Appendix 6.

Samsung has indirectly infringed at least claims 1-8 of the '645 Patent in this District and elsewhere in the United States by, among other things, actively inducing the use, offering for sale, selling, or importation of at least the '645 Accused Products. Samsung's customers who purchase devices and components thereof and operate such devices and components in accordance with Samsung's instructions directly infringe one or more claims of the '645 Patent in violation of 35 U.S.C. § 271. Samsung instructs its customers through at least user guides or websites, such as those located at:

https://downloadcenter.samsung.com/content/UM/202302/20230207045923682/SAM_S911_S916_S918_EN_UM_OS13_020223_FINAL.pdf; https://downloadcenter.samsung.com/content/UM/202502/20250222041039901/SAM_S931_S936_S938_EN_UG_OS15_012425_FINAL_AC_02072025.pdf; see also <https://www.samsungtvplus.com/>; <https://www.samsung.com/us/support/answer/ANS10001377/>; <https://www.samsung.com/us/support/answer/ANS10003225/>; and <https://www.samsung.com/us/support/answer/ANS00092489/>.

For example, as shown above, Samsung instructs its customers to “Capture the flavor with Food mode on your Galaxy phone or tablet,” “Use Portrait mode or Live Focus on your Galaxy phone,” and “Scan and edit documents on your Galaxy phone or tablet.” See https://downloadcenter.samsung.com/content/UM/202302/20230207045923682/SAM_S911_S916_S918_EN_UM_OS13_020223_FINAL.pdf; https://downloadcenter.samsung.com/content/UM/202502/20250222041039901/SAM_S931_S936_S938_EN_UG_OS15_012425_FINAL_AC_02072025.pdf; see also <https://www.samsung.com/us/support/answer/ANS10001377/>; <https://www.samsung.com/us/support/answer/ANS10003225/>; and <https://www.samsung.com/us/support/answer/ANS00092489/>.

Samsung is thereby liable for infringement of the '645 Patent pursuant to 35 U.S.C. § 271(b). Samsung has indirectly infringed at least claim 1 of the '645 Patent by, among other things, contributing to the direct infringement of others, including customers of the '645 Accused Products by making, offering to sell, or selling in the United States, or by importing a component of a patented machine, manufacture, or combination, or an apparatus for use in practicing a patented process, constituting a material part of the invention, knowing the same to be especially made or especially adapted for use in infringement of the '645 Patent, and not a staple article or commodity of commerce suitable for substantial non-infringing use.

For example, the '645 Accused Products each include hardware and software for implementing various image capture and correction processes. These are components of a patented machine, manufacture, or combination, or an apparatus for use in practicing a patented process. Furthermore, these components are a material part of the invention and upon information and belief are not a staple article or commodity of commerce suitable for substantial non-infringing use. Thus, Samsung is liable for infringement of the '645 Patent pursuant to 35 U.S.C. § 271(c).

Samsung has been on notice of the '645 Patent since at least July 7, 2021, based on correspondence directed to Mr. I. Lee of SEC from Mr. T. Yamamoto of Maxell. See Letter from T. Yamamoto to I. Lee dated July 7, 2021. This correspondence sets forth Maxell's belief that Samsung makes, uses, sells, offers to sell, or imports products that infringe certain of Maxell's patents and specifically identified the claims of the '645 Patent and exemplary accused products for that patent. By the time of trial, Samsung will thus have known and intended (since receiving this notice) that its continued actions would actively induce and contribute to actual infringement of at least claim 1 of the '645 Patent.

Samsung undertook and continued its infringing actions despite an objectively high likelihood that such activities infringed the '645 Patent, which has been duly issued by the USPTO and is presumed valid. For example, since at least July 7, 2021, Samsung has been aware of an objectively high likelihood that its actions constituted and continue to constitute infringement of the '645 Patent and that the '645 Patent is valid. On information and belief, Samsung could not reasonably, subjectively believe that its actions do not constitute infringement of the '645 Patent nor could it reasonably, subjectively believe that the patent is invalid. Despite that knowledge and subjective belief and the objectively high likelihood that its actions constitute infringement, Samsung continued its infringing activities. As such, Samsung has willfully infringed and continues to willfully infringe the '645 Patent.

Alternatively, to the extent that Samsung argues any particular accused component or structure (e.g., a detector, corrector, or controller) does not literally meet a claim element, that element is nevertheless present under the doctrine of equivalents. The corresponding structure in the Accused Products performs substantially the same function, in substantially the same way, to achieve substantially the same result as the claimed element, such that any differences are insubstantial.

7. The '950 Patent and Appendix 7

With respect to the '950 Patent, Appendix 7 shows how each element of claims 1-5, 7, 8, 10, 12, and 14 is found in the Accused Samsung '950 Products.

As shown in Appendix 7, the Accused Samsung '950 Products detect specific features within an image to guide image quality adjustments. As further shown in Appendix 7, each of the '950 Accused Products is observed to include a feature detection unit which detects a position where features of each pixel of an input picture signal have changed by, for example, implementing image sensors, camera application, image signal processor, and/or additional hardware and software to implement face detection, eye detection, lip detection, pet detection, and/or Portrait mode. Further, each of the '950 Accused Products is observed to include a region creation unit which creates a region by removing pixels with the features from an evaluated value extraction region, an evaluated value extraction unit, and a processing unit by, for example, implementing image sensors, camera application, image signal processor, and/or additional hardware and software to implement face detection, eye detection, lip detection, pet detection, and/or Portrait mode that includes removing pixels from specific regions to perform a value extraction and predetermined processing (e.g., specific processing based on the detected feature in the image). Further, each of the '950 Accused Products is observed to include a control unit which controls the processing unit in accordance with the evaluated value and controls the processing unit by using an evaluated value of a region from which pixels having an extracted predetermined feature are removed by, for example, implementing image sensors, camera application, image signal processor, and/or additional hardware and software to implement face detection, eye detection, lip detection, pet detection, and/or Portrait mode that includes the control unit controlling processing of the processing unit based on the evaluated value and a region from which pixels are extracted. See, e.g., <https://www.samsung.com/us/support/answer/ANS10003225/>; see also <https://r2.community.samsung.com/t5/CamCyclopedia/ISP-Image-Signal-Processor/ba-p/13485145>; <https://news.samsung.com/global/new-galaxy-s22-camera-updates-let-you-capture-the-stars-like-a-pro>.

The following exemplary disclosures from webpages provided by Samsung provide evidence of the Accused Samsung '950 Products infringing at least claims 1-5, 7, 8, 10, 12, and 14 of the '950 Patent by implementing Portrait Mode and/or additional ISP detections and correction:

Face recognition management

Customize how face recognition works.

- From Settings, tap Security and privacy > Screen lock and biometrics > Face recognition.
 - Remove face data: Delete existing faces.
 - Add alternative appearance to enhance recognition: Enhance face recognition by adding an alternative appearance.
 - Face unlock: Enable or disable face recognition security.
 - Stay on Lock screen until swipe: When you unlock your device with face recognition, stay on the Lock screen until you swipe the screen.
 - Require open eyes: Facial recognition will only recognize your face when your eyes are open.
 - Brighten screen: Increase the screen brightness temporarily so that your face can be recognized in dark conditions.
 - About face recognition: Learn additional information about securing your device with face recognition.

Default structure of ISP

Every AP Chip manufacturer has their unique ISP structure. We will introduce the most basic structure here.

- Basic ISP block diagram

<https://r2.community.samsung.com/t5/CamCyclopedia/ISP-Image-Signal-Processor/ba-p/13485145>

3. WB (White Balance)[3]

This block helps the camera adjust the color balance and render them accurately. It ensures that an image has a uniform WB Gain and that the RGB of the grey (achromatic) areas are adjusted to the same value (to depict the grey as grey).

The sensor output fed to ISP has twice as many green channels as any other. This is the reason why the raw image before the application of WB Gain looks green overall. (Refer to 'De-mosaic' below)

4. De-mosaic (= Bayer Interpolation, Color Interpolation)

Most smartphone cameras use the Bayer type (or pattern) sensor. The Bayer sensor, as illustrated below [2] is 3 color filter combination sensor mounted on top of a photodiode array.

<https://r2.community.samsung.com/t5/CamCyclopedia/ISP-Image-Signal-Processor/ba-p/13485145>

FD (Face Detection)

This block detects faces in an image/video and passes their coordinates to the next block. The face coordinates can be used in other algorithms or solutions to implement different features.

[Example of application] Using FD information in AWB (Auto White Balance) and AE (Auto Exposure) algorithm blocks

1. When a face is detected, it compares and corrects the difference between the face brightness and the targeted brightness of the whole image. It utilizes the face coordinates received, to adjust the face brightness, etc.
2. When multiple sources are detected illuminating a face and the face is overly affected by these lights, this FD data can be used to correct the color on it. For example, if a face is detected in a low-color temperature light setup giving off a slightly reddish glow, the face coordinates are used to adjust the color of the face.

<https://r2.community.samsung.com/t5/CamCyclopedia/ISP-Image-Signal-Processor/ba-p/13485145>

Further, as shown in Appendices 7 and 11, technical specifications show that each of the Accused Samsung '950 Products include all necessary hardware, operating systems, and software required by each of claims 1-5, 7, 8, 10, 12, and 14 of the '950 Patent. For example, each of the Accused Samsung '950 Products include a feature detection unit which detects features of pixels (e.g., a face or lips), a region creation unit which creates a region by removing pixels with the detected features from an evaluated value extraction region, a processing unit, and a control unit which controls the processing unit using an evaluated value from the region from which the pixels were removed. See, e.g., Appendices 7 and 11 (identifying the technical specifications of the Accused Samsung '950 Products confirming the same). Thus, each of the Accused Samsung '950 Products infringes based on the same theories as shown in Appendix 7 because they include the same components and implement the same functionalities when performing image processing in Portrait Mode or using other facial recognition features as shown in Appendix 7.

Samsung has indirectly infringed at least claims 1-5, 7, 8, 10, 12, and 14 of the '950 Patent in this District and elsewhere in the United States by, among other things, actively inducing the use, offering for sale, selling, or importation of at least the '950 Accused Products. Samsung's customers who purchase devices and components thereof and operate such devices and components in accordance with Samsung's instructions directly infringe one or more claims of the '950 Patent in violation of 35 U.S.C. § 271. Samsung instructs its customers through at least user guides or websites, such as those located at:

Samsung is thereby liable for infringement of the '950 Patent pursuant to 35 U.S.C. § 271(b). Samsung has indirectly infringed at least claims 1-5, 7, 8, 10, 12, and 14 of the '950 Patent by, among other things, contributing to the direct infringement of others, including customers of the '950 Accused Products by making, offering to sell, or selling in the United States, or importing a component of a patented machine, manufacture, or combination, or an apparatus for use in practicing a patented process, constituting a material part of the invention, knowing the same to be especially made or especially adapted for use in infringement of the '950 Patent, and not a staple article or commodity of commerce suitable for substantial non-infringing use.

For example, the '950 Accused Products each include hardware and software for implementing various image capture, feature detection, and image processing functions. These are components of a patented machine, manufacture, or combination, or an apparatus for use in practicing a patented process. Furthermore, these components are a material part of the invention and, upon information and belief, are not a staple article or commodity of commerce suitable for substantial non-infringing use. Thus, Samsung is liable for infringement of the '950 Patent pursuant to 35 U.S.C. § 271(c).

Samsung has been on notice of the '950 Patent since at least December 29, 2021, based on correspondence directed to Mr. Daejin Jeon of SEC's IP Center from Mr. T. Yamamoto of Maxell. This correspondence sets forth Maxell's belief that Samsung makes, uses, sells, offers to sell, or imports products that infringe certain of Maxell's patents and specifically identified the claims of the '950 Patent and exemplary accused products for that patent. By the time of trial, Samsung will thus have known and intended (since receiving this notice) that its continued actions would actively induce and contribute to actual infringement of at least claim 1 of the '950 Patent.

Samsung undertook and continued its infringing actions despite an objectively high likelihood that such activities infringed the '950 Patent, which has been duly issued by the USPTO and is presumed valid. For example, since at least December 29, 2021, Samsung has been aware of an objectively high likelihood that its actions constituted and continue to constitute infringement of the '950 Patent and that the '950 Patent is valid. On information and belief, Samsung could not reasonably, subjectively believe that its actions do not constitute infringement of the '950 Patent nor could it reasonably, subjectively believe that the patent is invalid. Despite that knowledge and subjective belief and the objectively high likelihood that its actions constitute infringement, Samsung continued its infringing activities. As such, Samsung has willfully infringed and continues to willfully infringe the '950 Patent.

Alternatively, to the extent that Samsung argues any particular accused component or structure (e.g., a feature detection unit, region creation unit, or control unit) does not literally meet a claim element, that element is nevertheless present under the doctrine of equivalents. The corresponding structure in the Accused Products performs substantially the same function, in substantially the same way, to achieve substantially the same result as the claimed element, such that any differences are insubstantial.

8. The '228 Patent and Appendix 8

With respect to the '228 Patent, Appendix 8 shows how each element of claims 1, 2, and 4-9 is found in the Accused Samsung Smartwatch '228 Products and the Accused Samsung Smartphone '228 Products (collectively, the Accused Samsung '228 Products).

As shown in Appendix 8, the Accused Samsung '228 Products form a system where biometric information from one device, like a watch, controls information displayed on a second authenticated device, like a phone. As further shown in Appendix 8, each of the '228 Accused Products is observed to form a system with a first information processing device (e.g., Samsung Galaxy Watch or Samsung Galaxy Ring), including one or more dynamic sensors (e.g., heart rate sensors) and a communication interface (e.g., Bluetooth and/or Wi-Fi circuit), and a second information processing device, including one or more static biometric information acquisition sensors (e.g., Face detection sensor or fingerprint detection sensor), a processor (e.g., CPU), and a second communication interface (e.g., Bluetooth circuit and/or Wi-Fi circuit) that work in conjunction to perform various communications and implement functions such as authentication, biometric tracking, and emergency notification/display (e.g., Detect fall feature, Irregular Heart Rhythm Notification, SOS notification). See, e.g.,

Use the Detect fall feature on your Samsung smart watch

Whether you're adventurous and accident-prone or just cautious and safety-conscious, you can get some peace of mind with a Samsung Galaxy watch. The Galaxy Watch Active2, Galaxy Watch3, and all Wear OS models include a hard fall detection feature that will send out an SOS if it ever detects a hard fall. With this setting enabled, your emergency contacts can be notified immediately if you fall and need a little help.

<https://www.samsung.com/us/support/answer/ANS10003423/>

The fall detection feature is not turned on by default on the watch; therefore, you'll need to turn it on manually if you want to use it. It can only be enabled through the Galaxy Wearable app, so make sure the watch is connected first.

- 1 When you're ready, open the Galaxy Wearable app.
- 2 Next, tap Watch settings or Band settings, and then tap Safety and emergency.
- 3 Tap the switch next to Hard fall detection. If you don't have any emergency contacts listed, you will need to add them for this feature to work.
- 4 To select what to do when a fall is detected, tap Hard fall detection. Tap the switch next to Share info with emergency contacts if you want your watch to automatically text your loved ones your location information after a fall. You can also select an emergency call option if you would like.

<https://www.samsung.com/us/support/answer/ANS10003423/>

Use your Samsung smart watch in an emergency situation

It's best to always be prepared. If you ever need emergency assistance, your Samsung smart watch has features capable of helping, such as fall detection and SOS messages. Hopefully, you'll never find yourself in a real crisis, but if you do, you can send SOS messages to assigned contacts to let them know where you are and how to track you down. In the event you need medical assistance, your medical information can be quickly accessed to help first responders. Review the information below to learn about using your Samsung smart watch in emergency situations.

<https://www.samsung.com/us/support/answer/ANS10002904/>

You can easily enable SOS features on your Galaxy Watch7, Watch Ultra, or Fit3.

Navigate to and open the Galaxy Wearable app on your connected phone, and tap Watch settings or Band settings. Swipe to and tap Safety and emergency. From here you can add your Medical info, select Emergency contacts, adjust Emergency SOS settings, and enable Hard fall detection.

- Medical info: This is where you can enter your name and any conditions or allergies you may have, what medications you're taking, your blood type, notes, and more.
- Emergency contacts: You can select your closest contacts here. These are the people who will be contacted if you begin emergency sharing.
- Emergency SOS: Tap this to adjust your emergency settings. You can enable the swipe to call option, select which emergency number to contact, and turn on info sharing with emergency contacts.
- Hard fall detection: From here you can enable hard fall detection, turn on the option to require a swipe before calling an emergency number, select when to detect falls, what emergency number to contact, whether to play a warning sound, and share info with emergency contacts.

<https://www.samsung.com/us/support/answer/ANS10002904/>

Use your Galaxy phone or tablet in emergency situations

In a critical situation, your Galaxy phone or tablet can make all the difference. You can use it to make emergency calls or contact loved ones in a time of need. And if you have to act quickly, you can dial right from the Lock screen. Even your medical information can be right at your fingertips. Plus, your device can help keep you safe by silencing notifications while you're driving and alerting you to potentially dangerous situations, such as earthquakes and unknown Bluetooth trackers.

<https://www.samsung.com/us/support/answer/ANS10001579/>

Further, as shown in Appendices 8 and 11, technical specifications show that each of the Accused Samsung '228 Products include all necessary hardware, operating systems, and software required by each of claims 1, 2, and 4-9. For example, each of the Accused Samsung '228 Products form a system with a first information processing device (e.g., a Galaxy Watch) having a dynamic biometric acquisition sensor (e.g., heart rate or fall detection sensor), and a second information processing device (e.g., a Galaxy smartphone) having a static biometric information acquisition sensor (e.g., fingerprint sensor) for user authentication and a display screen for displaying information based on the dynamic biometric information received from the first device. See, e.g., Appendices 8 and 11 (identifying the technical specifications of the Accused Samsung '228 Products confirming the same). Thus, each of the Accused Samsung '228 Products infringes based on the same theories as shown in Appendix 8 because they include the same components and implement the same functionalities when using features like Fall Detection or Irregular Heart Rhythm Notification as shown in Appendix 8.

Samsung has indirectly infringed at least claims 1, 2, and 4-9 of the '228 Patent in this District and elsewhere in the United States by, among other things, actively inducing the use, offering for sale, selling, or importation of at least the '228 Accused Products. Samsung's customers who purchase devices and components thereof and operate such devices and components in accordance with Samsung's instructions directly infringe one or more claims of the '228 Patent in violation of 35 U.S.C. § 271. Samsung instructs its customers through at least user guides or websites, such as those located at:

<https://www.samsung.com/us/support/answer/ANS10003423/>;

<https://www.samsung.com/us/support/answer/ANS10002904/>.

For example, as shown above, Samsung instructs its customers to “Set up and record an ECG with your Galaxy Watch,” “Use the Detect fall feature on your Samsung smart watch,” “Use your Samsung smart watch in an emergency situation,” and “Use your Galaxy phone or tablet in emergency situations.” See <https://www.samsung.com/us/support/answer/ANS10001579/>; see also <https://www.samsung.com/us/apps/samsung-health-monitor/>; <https://www.samsung.com/us/support/answer/ANS10003423/>; <https://www.samsung.com/us/support/answer/ANS10002904/>.

Samsung is thereby liable for infringement of the '228 Patent pursuant to 35 U.S.C. § 271(b). Samsung has indirectly infringed at least claims 1, 2, and 4-9 of the '228 Patent by, among other things, contributing to the direct infringement of others, including customers of the '228 Accused Products by making, offering to sell, or selling in the United States, or importing a component of a patented machine, manufacture, or combination, or an apparatus for use in practicing a patented process, constituting a material part of the invention, knowing the same to be especially made or especially adapted for use in infringement of the '228 Patent, and not a staple article or commodity of commerce suitable for substantial non-infringing use.

For example, the '228 Accused Products each include hardware and software for implementing various biometric tracking and emergency notification functions, such as Detect fall feature, Irregular Heart Rhythm Notification, and/or SOS requests. These are components of a patented machine, manufacture, or combination, or an apparatus for use in practicing a patented process. Furthermore, these components are a material part of the invention and, upon information and belief, are not a staple article or commodity of commerce suitable for substantial non-infringing use. Thus, Samsung is liable for infringement of the '228 Patent pursuant to 35 U.S.C. § 271(c).

Samsung has been on notice of the '228 Patent since at least, July 7, 2021, based on correspondence directed to Mr. I. Lee of SEC from Mr. T. Yamamoto of Maxell. See Letter from T. Yamamoto to I. Lee dated July 7, 2021. This correspondence sets forth Maxell's belief that Samsung makes, uses, sells, offers to sell, or imports products that infringe certain of Maxell's patents and specifically identified the claims of the '228 Patent and exemplary accused products for that patent. By the time of trial, Samsung will thus have known and intended (since receiving this notice) that its continued actions would actively induce and contribute to actual infringement of at least claims 1, 2, and 4-9 of the '228 Patent.

Samsung undertook and continued its infringing actions despite an objectively high likelihood that such activities infringed the '228 Patent, which has been duly issued by the USPTO and is presumed valid. For example, since at least July 7, 2021, Samsung has been aware of an objectively high likelihood that its actions constituted and continue to constitute infringement of the '228 Patent and that the '228 Patent is valid. On information and belief, Samsung could not reasonably, subjectively believe that its actions do not constitute infringement of the '228 Patent nor could it reasonably, subjectively believe that the patent is invalid. Despite that knowledge and subjective belief and the objectively high likelihood that its actions constitute infringement, Samsung continued its infringing activities. As such, Samsung has willfully infringed and continues to willfully infringe the '228 Patent.

Alternatively, to the extent that Samsung argues any particular accused component or structure (e.g., a dynamic or static biometric sensor, processor, or communication interface) does not literally meet a claim element, that element is nevertheless present under the doctrine of equivalents. The corresponding structure in the Accused Products performs substantially the same function, in substantially the same way, to achieve substantially the same result as the claimed element, such that any differences are insubstantial.

9. The '646 Patent and Appendix 9

With respect to the '646 Patent, Appendix 9 shows how each element of claims 1-8 and 11 is found in the Accused Samsung '646 Products.

As shown in Appendix 9, the Accused Samsung '646 Products display controls for an external device on the lock screen, allowing for remote operation without unlocking the terminal. As further shown in Appendix 9, each of the '646 Accused Products includes a display, an operating input interface (e.g., touch screen), a wireless communication interface (e.g., Wi-Fi circuit), and a processor (e.g., CPU) that work in conjunction to implement a first, second, and third display modes when executing one or more applications or functions, such as Samsung Music application, Samsung TV application, Netflix application, and Casting functions. For example, upon information and belief, each of the '646 Accused Products are sold with Netflix application that implements the claimed display modes. See <https://techcrunch.com/2020/02/13/netflix-fends-off-new-streaming-rivals-by-way-of-samsung-partnership/?guccounter=1#:~:text=At%20Samsung's%20Unpacked%20event%20this,streaming%20service%20with%20Samsung%20devices.>

Further, as shown in Appendices 9 and 11, technical specifications show that each of the Accused Samsung '646 Products include all necessary hardware, operating systems, and software required by each of claims 1-8 and 11 of the '646 Patent. For example, each of the Accused Samsung '646 Products include a display, a wireless communication interface, and a processor that, when waking from sleep, displays a control icon on the authentication screen to remotely control an external device (e.g., a TV) without unlocking, if the device was communicating with the external device prior to entering the sleep state. See, e.g., Appendices 9 and 11 (identifying the technical specifications of the Accused Samsung '646 Products confirming the same). Thus, each of the Accused Samsung '646 Products infringes based on the same theories as shown in Appendix 9 because they include the same components and implement the same functionalities when displaying lock screen controls for media being cast to an external device as shown in Appendix 9.

Samsung has indirectly infringed at least claims 1-8 and 11 of the '646 Patent in this District and elsewhere in the United States by, among other things, actively inducing the use, offering for sale, selling, or importation of at least the '646 Accused Products. Samsung's customers who purchase devices and components thereof and operate such devices and components in accordance with Samsung's instructions directly infringe one or more claims of the '646 Patent in violation of 35 U.S.C. § 271. Samsung induces or contributes to infringement by preinstalling and/or instructing customers to install the Netflix app at setup.

Samsung is thereby liable for infringement of the '646 Patent pursuant to 35 U.S.C. § 271(b). Samsung has indirectly infringed at least claims 1-8 and 11 of the '646 Patent by, among other things, contributing to the direct infringement of others, including customers of the '646 Accused Products by making, offering to sell, or selling in the United States, or importing a component of a patented machine, manufacture, or combination, or an apparatus for use in practicing a patented process, constituting a material part of the invention, knowing the same to be especially made or especially adapted for use in infringement of the '646 Patent, and not a staple article or commodity of commerce suitable for substantial non-infringing use.

For example, the '646 Accused Products each include hardware and software for having Smart View, Netflix application, and Casting functions for implementing three display modes. These are components of a patented machine, manufacture, or combination, or an apparatus for use in practicing a patented process. Furthermore, these components are a material part of the invention and, upon information and belief, are not a staple article or commodity of commerce suitable for substantial non-infringing use. Thus, Samsung is liable for infringement of the '646 Patent pursuant to 35 U.S.C. § 271(c).

Samsung has been on notice of the '646 Patent since at least, July 7, 2021 based on correspondence directed to Mr. I. Lee of SEC from Mr. T. Yamamoto of Maxell. See Letter from T. Yamamoto to I. Lee dated July 7, 2021. This correspondence sets forth Maxell's belief that Samsung makes, uses, sells, offers to sell, or imports products that infringe certain of Maxell's patents and specifically identified the allowed patent application that issued as the '646 Patent, as well as exemplary allowed claims and exemplary accused products for that patent. By the time of trial, Samsung will thus have known and intended (since receiving this notice) that its continued actions would actively induce and contribute to actual infringement of at least claims 1-8 and 11 of the '646 Patent.

Samsung undertook and continued its infringing actions despite an objectively high likelihood that such activities infringed the '646 Patent, which has been duly issued by the USPTO and is presumed valid. For example, since at least July 7, 2021, Samsung has been aware of an objectively high likelihood that its actions constituted and continue to constitute infringement of the '646 Patent and that the '646 Patent is valid. On information and belief, Samsung could not reasonably, subjectively believe that its actions do not constitute infringement of the '646 Patent nor could it reasonably, subjectively believe that the patent is invalid. Despite that knowledge and subjective belief and the objectively high likelihood that its actions constitute infringement, Samsung continued its infringing activities. As such, Samsung has willfully infringed and continues to willfully infringe the '646 Patent.

Alternatively, to the extent that Samsung argues any particular accused component or structure (e.g., a processor, display, or wireless interface) does not literally meet a claim element, that element is nevertheless present under the doctrine of equivalents. The corresponding structure in the Accused Products performs substantially the same function, in substantially the same way, to achieve substantially the same result as the claimed element, such that any differences are insubstantial.

10. The '681 Patent and Appendix 10

With respect to the '681 Patent, Appendix 10 shows how each element of claims 1-5 and 7 is found in the Accused Samsung '681 Products.

As shown in Appendix 10, the Accused Samsung '681 Products transmit video to a receiver apparatus by first exchanging capability information to determine the transmission parameters. As further shown in Appendix 10, each of the '681 Accused Products includes a wireless communication circuitry (e.g., Wi-Fi circuit), audio/video signal generation circuits (e.g., display signal processor and/or image signal processor), memory (e.g., storage), and control circuitry (e.g., CPU) that work in conjunction to use Wi-Fi Direct communications and perform screen mirroring.

The following exemplary disclosures from webpages provided by Samsung provide evidence of the Accused Samsung '681 Products infringing at least claims 1-5, and 7 of the '681 Patent:

Screen mirroring to your Samsung TV

With compatible Samsung devices, you can share your content on the big screen! Rather than sending a stunning photo you recently took to a house full of people, just put it up on the TV and show everyone at once. The possibilities don't end there. You can also cast videos, presentations, and even games onto a larger screen. View our website to see which compatible Samsung TVs and Smart Monitors are available.

<https://www.samsung.com/us/support/answer/ANS10001896/>

What is screen mirroring?

Screen mirroring lets you mirror your phone's screen to a bigger screen, like a Smart TV. Exactly what's showing on your phone will appear on the TV, whether it's an app, a photo, or a video. Whenever you do something on your phone (like navigating to a different app), that action will also be shown on the other screen as well.

On Galaxy devices the screen mirroring feature is called Smart View. You can easily mirror your screen with Smart View by just tapping the Smart View icon and performing a few simple steps. For iPhones, the screen mirroring feature is called AirPlay, and it does the same exact thing - mirror images, videos, or other media. Using AirPlay is similar, but a little different from using Smart View.

No matter which one you have, it's a great way to share videos, photos, or other things on your phone right on your Smart TV.

Further, as shown in Appendices 10 and 11, technical specifications show that each of the Accused Samsung '681 Products include all necessary hardware, operating systems, and software required by each of claims 1-5 and 7 of the '681 Patent. For example, each of the Accused Samsung '681 Products include wireless communication circuitry, audio/video signal generation circuitry, memory, and control circuitry that, upon connecting to a display apparatus, sends a request message with a first number, receives capability information from the display to determine parameters for the audio/video stream, and sends a second request message with a different, second number when a predetermined condition is met. See, e.g., Appendices 10 and 11 (identifying the technical specifications of the Accused Samsung '681 Products confirming the same). Thus, each of the Accused Samsung '681 Products infringes based on the same theories as shown in Appendix 10 because they include the same components and implement the same functionalities when performing screen mirroring using Wi-Fi Direct protocols like Smart View as shown in Appendix 10.

Samsung has indirectly infringed at least claims 1-5 and 7 of the '681 Patent in this District and elsewhere in the United States by, among other things, actively inducing the use, offering for sale, selling, or importation of at least the '681 Accused Products. everyone at once.” See

Samsung is thereby liable for infringement of the '681 Patent pursuant to 35 U.S.C. § 271(b). Samsung has indirectly infringed at least claims 1-5 and 7 of the '681 Patent by, among other things, contributing to the direct infringement of others, including customers of the '681 Accused Products by making, offering to sell, or selling in the United States, or importing a component of a patented machine, manufacture, or combination, or an apparatus for use in practicing a patented process, constituting a material part of the invention, knowing the same to be especially made or especially adapted for use in infringement of the '681 Patent, and not a staple article or commodity of commerce suitable for substantial non-infringing use.

For example, the '681 Accused Products each include hardware and software for having Screen mirroring, Smart View, Samsung TV application, and/or Netflix application, each of which use Wi-Fi Direct to perform screen mirroring. These are components of a patented machine, manufacture, or combination, or an apparatus for use in practicing a patented process. Furthermore, these components are a material part of the invention and, upon information and belief, are not a staple article or commodity of commerce suitable for substantial non-infringing use. Thus, Samsung is liable for infringement of the '681 Patent pursuant to 35 U.S.C. § 271(c).

Samsung has been on notice of the '681 Patent since at least November 28, 2024, based on correspondence directed to Mr. H. Lee of SEC from Mr. T. Yamamoto of Maxell. This correspondence sets forth Maxell's belief that Samsung makes, uses, sells, offers to sell, or imports products that infringe certain of Maxell's patents and specifically identified the allowed patent application that issued as the '681 Patent, as well as exemplary allowed claims and exemplary accused products for that patent. By the time of trial, Samsung will thus have known and intended (since receiving this notice) that its continued actions would actively induce and contribute to actual infringement of at least claims 1-5 and 7 of the '681 Patent.

Samsung undertook and continued its infringing actions despite an objectively high likelihood that such activities infringed the '681 Patent, which has been duly issued by the USPTO and is presumed valid. For example, since at least November 28, 2024, Samsung has been aware of an objectively high likelihood that its actions constituted and continue to constitute infringement of the '681 Patent and that the '681 Patent is valid. On information and belief, Samsung could not reasonably, subjectively believe that its actions do not constitute infringement of the '681 Patent nor could it reasonably, subjectively believe that the patent is invalid. Despite that knowledge and subjective belief and the objectively high likelihood that its actions constitute infringement, Samsung continued its infringing activities. As such, Samsung has willfully infringed and continues to willfully infringe the '681 Patent.

Alternatively, to the extent that Samsung argues any particular accused component or structure (e.g., control circuitry, memory, or communication circuitry) does not literally meet a claim element, that element is nevertheless present under the doctrine of equivalents. The corresponding structure in the Accused Products performs substantially the same function, in substantially the same way, to achieve substantially the same result as the claimed element, such that any differences are insubstantial.

D. P.R. 3-1(d): Literal Infringement and Infringement Under the Doctrine of Equivalents

Pursuant to P.R. 3-1(d), Maxell asserts that each element of each claim is literally present in each of the Accused Instrumentalities. To the extent any claim limitation is found not to be literally present, Maxell asserts that such limitation is present under the doctrine of equivalents in each of the Accused Instrumentalities. By asserting that a claim element may be present under the doctrine of equivalents, Maxell does not waive its right to assert literal infringement of that claim element. Additional, information about infringement under the doctrine of equivalents is set forth in the attached claim charts at Appendices 1-10 and Maxell incorporates by reference the analysis of accused functions, the way of performing these functions, and the results of such performance from its literal infringement theories in the appropriate claim elements into the doctrine of equivalent infringement theories, as identified in Appendices 1-10. Further, various claim limitations implicate the software, firmware, and/or source code of the Accused Samsung Products. Therefore, to the extent necessary, Maxell reserves all rights to supplement its Doctrine of Equivalents theories/contentions 30 days after Defendant (or third-parties where) substantially complete adequate production of source code for each of the Accused Samsung Products in accordance with P.R. 3-1(g), Judge Schroeder's standing Patent Discovery Order, and/or P.R. 3-6(a).

E. P.R. 3-1(e): Priority Based on Earlier Applications

Pursuant to P.R. 3-1(e), Maxell asserts that the patents-in-suit are entitled to claim priority to at least the following applications:

F. P.R. 3-1(f): Identification of Any Maxell Instrumentalities that Practice Claimed Inventions

Pursuant to P.R. 3-1(f), Maxell states that it is not presently aware of any of its own apparatuses, products, devices, processes, methods, acts, or other instrumentalities that practice the claimed inventions of the patents-in-suit.

G. P.R. 3-1(g): Source Code

Pursuant to P.R. 3-1(g), Maxell asserts the following with respect to the patents-in-suit.

Claims 1 and 14 of the '088 Patent recite functionality that is implemented by using a combination of hardware and software. Thus, to the extent that inspection of code indicates that an infringement theory needs to be changed or is not already disclosed, Maxell reserves rights to supplement its infringement contentions after Samsung and/or third parties produce adequate source code for each of the products accused of infringing the '088 Patent.

Claims 1 and 4 of the '650 Patent recite functionality that is implemented by using a combination of hardware and software. supplement its infringement contentions after Samsung and/or third parties produce adequate source code for each of the products accused of infringing the '646 Patent.

Claims 1-5, and 7 of the '681 Patent recite functionality that is implemented by using a combination of hardware and software. Thus, to the extent that inspection of code indicates that an infringement theory needs to be changed or is not already disclosed, Maxell reserves rights to supplement its infringement contentions after Samsung and/or third parties produce adequate source code for each of the products accused of infringing the '681 Patent.
