08/30/2020		Plaintiffs objections to Mr. Shriver's deposition are overruled. Plaintiff makes several arguments against admission. First, Plaintiff asserts that Mr. Shriver had no personal knowledge. Plaintiffs argument is really an argument about the weight the testimony should be given and does not go to admissibility. Plaintiff points out that Mr. Shriver is less than certain as to whether the HAL system existed in the exact configuration necessary. But the fact that Mr. Shriver cast doubt on whether his company produced a HAL system with the relevant specifications for this case is a fact issue for the jury. The jury decides what constitutes prior art and whether it anticipates/renderers obvious. Second, Plaintiff asserts that Mr. Shriver's testimony is improper expert testimony. Mr. Shriver founded a small company in the 1990s that produced these HAL systems. Mr. Shriver is testifying as to his personal knowledge about whether his company did a certain thing or whether his company's main product could perform a certain task. This is similar to the testimony that we heard from Fred Torok. Mr. Shriver's testimony seems more akin to Mr. Torok's testimony than to Mr. McAlexander's testimony. Finally, Plaintiff raises Rule 403. Plaintiff does not explain why there would be any specific unfair prejudice. Plaintiff's letter brief merely argues as to the weight of the evidence.
