A YEAR IN REVIEW

Data from the 2006 Handango Yardstick and comparisons to the 2005 report reveal the following statistics and trends.

Smartphone application numbers and content providers continue to grow. More than 11,000 new software titles were added to the Handango catalog in 2006, with 1,231 new mobile content providers joining the Handango Content Partner Program. Although currently one of the smaller catalogs, BlackBerry had the fastest growing content library with an 81% increase over last year in the number of new applications added. The Pocket PC platform saw the highest number of content titles added at 3,627.

Average selling price is increasing

The 2006 Yardstick reported an overall increase in ASP, up from $20.03 in 2005 to $21.16 in 2006. Medical applications netted the highest average selling price at $49.26. Medical professionals are increasingly relying on mobile software to enhance productivity, giving content providers an opportunity to create more robust software in this category. The second highest ASP was seen for Development Tools ($43.62), with Recognition & Languages ($31.23), Translation ($26.91) and Business & Professional ($26.58) rounding out the top five.

Consumers utilize their smartphones for both personal and professional use.

The Business & Professional category of software had the highest overall sales, followed by Productivity, Entertainment, Games, Travel, Utilities, Communications and Multimedia. The best selling applications reflect a combination of entertainment, personal productivity and business software, which indicates that consumers are using smartphones for both personal and professional use. Some titles that made the best sellers lists on multiple platforms include travel guide WorldMate, mobile instant messenger IM+ and poker game Aces Texas Hold'em.

Entertainment remains popular and streaming media content is introduced Building on last year's surge in multimedia content, 2006 saw a rise in demand for streaming media applications, with MobiTV, HandiTV and PocketStreamer Deluxe topping the best selling lists. Entertainment content ranked third in overall sales by category, while search terms "ringtones", "games" and "MP3/music" made the top five in overall searches.

Casual games remain strong in both searches and sales Games ranked fourth in sales by category and third in searches, further demonstrating that smartphone owners use their devices for entertainment purposes. Solitaire, sudoku, poker and Tetris(R) were the most commonly downloaded games across all platforms with Palm OS and Pocket PC being the most popular platforms supporting games.

Palm Treo 650 remains top device adding software

The Palm Treo 650 topped the list of devices adding software in both 2005 and 2006. Also seen in the top ten this year were device models across a range of platforms including the Cingular 8125, Motorola Q, BlackBerry 8700c and Palm TX. Not reflected in the platform Yardstick are devices released later in the year that are quickly rising in the amount of downloaded content. These devices include the BlackBerry Pearl, Palm Treo 700p, Samsung BlackJack, T-Mobile Dash and Nokia N73.

PLATFORM OVERVIEW

In addition to the all-platform summary report, versions of the Handango Yardstick were created for each of the five leading smartphone operating systems.

BlackBerry

The Handango Yardstick reported another significant year for BlackBerry with an 81 percent increase over last year in new applications and an 87 percent increase in new content providers. BlackBerry continues to be popular with workers as Business & Professional software was the top category for this platform based on revenue. This category also represented the highest ASP at $39.87. The top BlackBerry devices adding content in 2006 were the BlackBerry 8700c, BlackBerry 7100i, Blackberry 8700g, BlackBerry 7130e and BlackBerry 7290.
