Frederick:

There was a business-to-business call this morning. Our respective parties agreed to allow Jesco to further conduct due diligence with a deadline of the end of January, 2024 with the express agreement to attempt to finish sooner as time is of the essence. Speaking of time, the parties also agreed that, although there is an extension of time, any settlements or further action will be contemplated retroactively to the date of our initial notice letter.

Please reply all confirming your consent to the above.

Thank you.

Dear Mr. Dorchak:

I am in receipt of your letter dated November 14 regarding U.S. Patent No. 11,751,302, in response to my letter of October 31. As you recognized, the offer in my letter regarding the commencement of licensing discussions was open until today, November 15. In light of the circumstances, including the upcoming holidays, we are willing to extend the offer to December 7, 2023. Our intellectual property is a critical part of our business and while we prefer to resolve this matter amicably via licensing discussions rather than resorting to litigation, we remain steadfast in protecting our patent rights.

We look forward to hearing from you before December 7, 2023.
