Stuck on Hennessy continuous loops...

Hello,

Firstly apologies if this has already been covered in a previous thread. I have searched but couldn't find anything.

I'm about to switch from whoopies to continuous loops on my Hennessy, but getting a bit stuck. So far I've found out that a 15" loop is needed instead of the typical 12", but when making a 15" how much Amsteel would I need to start off with please?

Also is a 6-8" bury still strong enough on a slightly bigger loop?

Any help would be greatly appreciated 🙏

Here's a video that lays out the process very nicely. You can vary the length and length of the buries to suit your own taste. 6" of bury will do nicely. The length of the bury does not need to increase for longer loops.

You will need to start with ~ 44" (30" for the loop, 2" for shrinkage, 12" for two 6" buries) of rope for each 15" loop. This will change if you change the length of the buries.
