Re: LG Display Co., Ltd. Patents

Dear Mr. Huang:

As you may already know, LG Display Co., Ltd. ("LG Display") is the largest display maker in the world and the industry leader in research and development of display technologies. LG Display is also the owner of an extensive world-wide patent portfolio covering its technologies, including twisted nematic ("TN") and in-plane switching ("IPS") displays.

We have been studying products made, used, imported or sold by Tianma Micro-electronics Co.,Ltd. ("Tianma") vis-a-vis our patent portfolio and based upon our initial review, a number of Tianma products incorporate or/and use features and functions covered by LG Display's patents. Tianma, therefore, directly and/or indirectly infringes LG Display's patents. As an example of our initial findings, attached hereto are claim charts clearly showing Tianma's products reading on certain LG Display's patents. Further, we are continuing our review of additional Tianma products and LG Display's patents.

We have been very patient with Tianma since our initial correspondence with respect to Tianma's need to be covered under a license to LG Display's patents. Indeed, during our July 30th meeting at Tianma's office, you expressed a willingness to continue licensing discussions but have since reneged on your commitment and have been unresponsive to our most recent communications. Because Tianma has not provided adequate responses and has not followed up with its prior promises, Tianma leaves us with no choice but to escalate this matter. While LG Display hopes to resolve this matter informally by continuing our discussions in a productive manner, please be aware that LG Display may take other appropriate actions to protect its rights, including instituting a legal action.

If Tianma is still interested in resolving this matter informally by continuing our discussions, please contact me before November 13, 2015 to schedule a mutually agreeable time to meet..

Sincerely,

Junghoon Kenneth Oh
Vice President
Head of Intellectual Property Division
