Motion to Stay Pending Inter Partes Review				Denied
Stay of Proceedings ↳ Factors Considered ↳ Prejudice From Stay/Tactical Advantage Stay of Proceedings ↳ Factors Considered ↳ Simplification of Issues Stay of Proceedings ↳ Factors Considered ↳ Stage of Litigation				The court denied without prejudice defendant's motion to stay plaintiff's entire action pending inter partes review of 2 of 6 patents because the undue prejudice to plaintiff, lack of potential simplification of issues, and later stage of the case weighed against a stay. "Granting a stay as to the entire litigation would cause the four unchallenged . . . patents to languish unresolved for an unspecified amount of time, and up to two years if one or both of [defendant's] petitions is granted. . . . Furthermore, the Court finds Xerox's assumption that the PTO will grant its petitions based solely on statistics too speculative. . . . [T]he parties have engaged in significant discovery efforts in this complex litigation. . . . [A]ny small inefficiency resulting from denying the stay is outweighed by substantial efficiencies resulting from reviewing common documents and deposing common witnesses only once."

Mar. 17, 2014	1 6 9 ↓	ORDER: Motion hearing held on 3/14/2014 on plaintiff RR Donnelley & Sons' Motion to amend/correct the Case Schedule 162 . This Court having heard substantive argument on plaintiff's motion in court, no briefing was deemed necessary, and the motion is granted in part and denied in part. The motion is denied with respect to RR Donnelley's request for this Court to "reaffirm" its order denying defendant Xerox's motion to stay 138 because there is no need for this Court to do so without any request for reconsideration of that order. The remainder of RR Donnelley's motion to amend the schedule is granted. The deadline for RR Donnelley's LPR 3.1 Final Infringement contentions on the Cyman patents is extended to 28 days following Xerox's tender of the previously agreed upon discovery. This Court directs Xerox to provide RR Donnelley with the previously agreed upon discovery within 14 days of this Order. Further, this Court extends RR Donnelley's deadline for LPR 3.2 Final Enforceability and Validity contentions on the Cyman patents to 28 days following the deadline for their LPR 3.1 Infringement contentions. -	Apr. 12, 2016	1 9 8 ↓	MINUTE entry before the Honorable John Robert Blakey: Status hearing held on 4/12/16 and continued, as previously scheduled, to 5/31/16 at 9:45 a.m. in Courtroom 1725. As discussed in open court, Defendants' motion to stay 180 and motion for extension of time 183 are granted in part, and denied in part. Plaintiff's motion to seal 192 is granted. All forthcoming claim construction deadlines are hereby stricken. However, fact discovery shall proceed, and the 5/31/16 fact discovery deadline stands. If the parties intend to file any motions to compel or motions for protective orders, they are advised not to wait until near the end of discovery. Moreover, although the Court will issue a forthcoming ruling on Defendants' motion to dismiss 98 , no party shall object to the production of discovery in the interim based on the motion's pending status. At the 5/31/16 status hearing, the parties shall come prepared to address whether the claim construction deadlines should remain stayed. Motion to Stay Pending Inter Partes Review			Denied without prejudice
			Stay of Proceedings ↳ Factors Considered ↳ Prejudice From Stay/Tactical Advantage Stay of Proceedings ↳ Factors Considered ↳ Simplification of Issues The court denied without prejudice defendants' motion to stay pending their petitions for inter partes review because the lack of potential simplification of issues and potential undue prejudice weighed against a stay. "While it is possible that the IPR proceedings could simplify the case, as a final Board decision could cancel [plaintiff's] claims or give rise to the preclusive effects of § 315(e)(2), it is an overstatement to say that the IPRs will simplify the case because the Board could opt against instituting IPR. Thus, while granting a stay at this juncture 'guarantees . . . delay, it does not necessarily guarantee . . . clarity.' . . . Even assuming Defendants are correct that [plaintiff] will not suffer undue prejudice as a result of instituting a stay in spite of the Court having already denied a motion to dismiss, discovery being underway, and Defendants having waited more than eight months after [plaintiff] initiated this lawsuit to request IPR, the Court declines to grant a stay because the benefits of doing so at this point are illusory. . . . Patent litigation is a long road, and the Court does not wish to add an extra mile without a concomitant benefit."

Jan. 04, 2017 26 ↓	ORDER signed by the Honorable Edmond E. Chang. For the reasons stated in the Order, which is being entered in both 15 C 8913 and 16 C 8897, the motion to stay 58 is denied as unnecessary and the motion to dismiss 84 is granted in part. Case No. 15 C 8913 is dismissed for lack of standing, and because it is subsumed by 16 C 8897. The Clerk's Office shall terminate 15 C 8913, and a separate AO-450 judgment shall be entered. District Court Procedural Issues ↳ Standing ↳ Patent Rights Sufficient To Convey Standing		The court granted in part defendant's motion to dismiss plaintiff's patent infringement actions for lack of standing. "[Defendant] argues that not only should [one case] be dismissed for lack of standing, but it should be dismissed with prejudice, thus in effect preventing [plaintiff] from pursuing the [later-filed] action for post-[standing] damages. On review of the record, although [plaintiff] made several unreasonable mistakes that warrant sanctions, the ultimate sanction of dismissal with prejudice is too harsh here. To start, it does not appear that [plaintiff] acted in outright bad faith when it filed the [first] lawsuit. There is no stratagem that would motivate [plaintiff] to intentionally misstate its standing to sue. [Plaintiff] would have risked the unwinding of any victory if it were later discovered (as it was) that it had no standing to sue, and also would have (as it does now) faced sanctions for pursuing the litigation in the first place. . . . But the Court retains jurisdiction to implement the attorney's fees and costs shifting as explained in this Order."

"The Court was going to enter a stay pending inter partes review in [one of the parties'] cases that was dismissed for lack of standing], and does so in this case (except for the answer deadline and the status report requirement). . . . [Plaintiff] argues that waiting is not worth it because . . . nearly half (1,621) of IPR petitions did not result in instituted trials. But of those 1,621 petitions, 583 petitions resulted in a settlement before the institution decision was even made. Those 583 settlements presumably resolved at least some, and perhaps all, of the disputes between the parties. Adding those 583 petitions to the 1,674 petitions that did result in instituted trials means that around 68.5% of the total petitions had a direct impact on the disputes between the parties."

Mar. 12, 2017	4 7	MEMORANDUM OPINION AND ORDER signed by the Honorable Matthew F. Renewed Motion - Motion to Stay Pending Inter Partes Review			Denied
Stay of Proceedings L Factors Considered L Prejudice From Stay/Tactical Advantage		The court denied defendant's renewed motion to stay pending inter partes review because the undue prejudice to plaintiff, lack of potential simplification of issues, and stage of the case weighed against a stay. "[Plaintiff] argues persuasively that staying the case pending the IPR proceeding instituted by [movant] would cause [plaintiff] a tactical disadvantage. . . . [I]f, for example, the PTAB rejects a particular ground of invalidity asserted by [movant], [movant] cannot re-assert that ground in this lawsuit. . . . But this same bar will not apply to [the other defendant], which did not seek institution of IPR proceedings but which would benefit from favorable rulings in the IPR instituted by [movant]. Thus the defendants collectively will get two bites at the invalidity apple if the Court stays this case pending conclusion of the IPR proceedings. . . . [T]he PTAB instituted IPR proceedings on 23 of the 53 claims at issue. . . . Thus a significant number of claims will remain for determination in this suit irrespective of the outcome of the IPR. . . . A stay would bring matters to a grinding halt for a period of somewhere between a year and two years, depending on whether there is an appeal of the IPR rulings."

But this same bar will not apply to [the other defendant], which did not seek institution of IPR proceedings but which would benefit from favorable rulings in the IPR instituted by [movant]. Thus the defendants collectively will get two bites at the invalidity apple if the Court stays this case pending conclusion of the IPR proceedings. . . . [T]he PTAB instituted IPR proceedings on 23 of the 53 claims at issue. . . . Thus a significant number of claims will remain for determination in this suit irrespective of the outcome of the IPR. . . . A stay would bring matters to a grinding halt for a period of somewhere between a year and two years, depending on whether there is an appeal of the IPR rulings."

Mar. 24, 2017	1 0 1	ORDER Signed by the Honorable Amy J. St. Eve on 3/24/2017: The Court denies Defendant's motion to stay 84 . [For further details, see Order.] Mailed notice(kef,) (Entered: 03/24/2017)	Oil-Dri Corporation of America v. Nestle Purina Petcare Company 1-15-cv-01067 (NDIL)
Motion to Stay Pending Inter Partes Review			Denied
Stay of Proceedings └ Factors Considered └ Likelihood Of Success (Stay)		The court denied defendant's motion to stay pending its appeal of inter partes review proceedings. "Even if [the prior judge] did not deny a stay pending appeal before the Federal Circuit, the Court denies [defendant's] current request. The factors of whether a stay will simplify the issues in question, streamline the trial, and reduce the burden of litigation on the parties and the court favor [plaintiff]. . . . The Court already has the benefit of the PTAB's expert analysis and record, and the PTAB's decision has already simplified the case somewhat because the IPR petitioner is estopped from arguing that a 'claim is invalid on any ground that the petitioner raised or reasonably could have raised during that [IPR]'. . . . The Court further notes that [plaintiff] has provided statistics showing that there is a 92% chance that the Federal Circuit will affirm the PTAB as to every challenged claim. . . . The IPR process -- particularly where the PTAB upholds the validity of the plaintiff's patent -- should not constitute an automatic multi-year pause button."

"[A]t this stage, when the PTAB has issued a decision rejecting defendant's invalidity contentions, the likelihood of a further stay resulting in further clarification is limited. . . . The possibility of lengthy additional delay for that modest possible benefit is great. . . . In its initial decision granting defendant's motion for a stay, the court found that [plaintiff's] declaration [that the parties were direct competitors] was undisputed, as it still appears to be. Stay of Proceedings L Factors ConsideredL Harm Without Stay		The court denied defendants' motion to reconsider an earlier order denying without prejudice defendants' motion to stay pending their petition for inter partes review. "Defendants characterize the discovery as an unreasonable 'campaign' of discovery that Plaintiff unleashed as 'an avalanche' after having made unreasonable settlement demands that scuttled the settlement conference. Yet Defendants have filed no motion for protective order under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 26 to try to limit that discovery. Instead, they are pressing their argument that no discovery ought to occur at all in light of their IPR petition and their request to stay the case. . . . [T]he Court sees Defendants' complaints about the discovery as being addressable in the ordinary course of the litigation, without a stay -- at least for now. . . . Defendants' authority for pre-institution stays is relatively thin or is distinguishable."

Stay of Proceedings L Factors ConsideredL Simplification of Issues		The court denied defendant's motion to stay pending institution of inter partes review and found that stage of the case and lack of simplification of the issues disfavored a stay. "The Court acknowledges that it previously stayed this case before the PTAB decided whether to grant any of Defendants' IPR petitions. . . . Without an instituted IPR as to the '330 Patent or reason to believe one will materialize, the Court does not find that another stay at this time would simplify the proceedings or reduce the burden of litigation on the parties and the Court. This holds especially true here because the Court has postponed the claim construction hearing until after the PTAB issues its final decisions on the '825 and '202 Patents, with the opening claim construction brief currently due on January 17, 2025."
