For the foregoing reasons, the Court DENIES InterDigital's Motion to Dismiss Counterclaims 54 and DENIES Disney's Motion for Preliminary Injunction 50 . (lom) (Entered: 05/28/2025)
		Motion/Application for Preliminary Injunction	Denied
		TRO & Preliminary Injunction ↳ Enjoined Activity ↳ International Antisuit Injunction	The court denied defendant's motion for a preliminary injunction preventing plaintiff from enforcing any injunction awarded in Brazilian court proceedings until this court resolves defendants' RAND counterclaims. "Even if the Court agreed that a preliminary injunction from the Brazilian Court would cause [Defendant] irreparable harm—an issue which the Court does not resolve today—the Court finds that [Defendant] does not currently face the likelihood of irreparable harm. No Brazilian court has issued a preliminary injunction, the terms of a hypothetical preliminary injunction are unknown and [Defendant] has not shown that it is likely that a preliminary injunction will issue."

Mar. 05, 2026	156	(IN CHAMBERS) Order on Motion to Compel (ECF 134) by Magistrate Judge Brianna Fuller Mircheff. The Motion is DENIED. SEE ORDER FOR DETAILS. 134 (ch) (Entered: 03/05/2026)
		Motion to Compel Discovery	Denied
		Disclosures & Discovery L Deposition & Written Discovery L Request for Production/Inspection Privilege L Waiver of Privilege L Common Interest Doctrine	The court denied plaintiff's motion to compel defendant to produce a common interest agreement between defendant and another company involved in separate litigation against plaintiff. "[Plaintiff's] hypothesis is that [Defendant] and [the other company] are working together to try to drive down the licensing rate for [Plaintiff's] patent. Whatever merit there may be to that claim, the common interest agreement will not shed light on it. A common interest agreement reflects the parties' perception that they have a shared legal interest. [Defendant] and [the other company] do appear to have a shared legal interest right now, in that they are both engaged in actions—either affirmatively or defensively—with [Plaintiff's] with respect to the patents at issue here. But acknowledging the existence of a shared legal interest 'does not come close to supporting an inference that there was an unlawful conspiracy to stifle competition.' Because the existence of a boilerplate common interest agreement is irrelevant to any claim or defense, the Court denies [Plaintiff's] motion insofar as it seeks production of such a document."
		Motion to Compel Discovery	Denied
		Disclosures & Discovery L Deposition & Written Discovery L Interrogatories Privilege L Waiver of Privilege L Common Interest Doctrine	The court denied plaintiff's motion to compel defendant to produce a narrative response at a high level describing communications defendant had with third parties regarding this litigation. "[Plaintiff's] hypothesis is that [Defendant] and [a non-party] are 'hold outs,' colluding to drive down the cost of any future licensing agreement. Such collusion, in [Plaintiff's] view, would bear on whether [Defendant] was negotiating a RAND rate in good faith. . . . The problem for [Plaintiff] . . . is that it entered an ESI agreement that email collections would not be demanded by either side. The Court blessed that agreement. And the Court sees no way for [Defendant] to answer Interrogatory No. 15, even at a high level of generality, without conducting an email collection. . . . [Plaintiff] points to the common interest agreement as evidence of collusion, but . . . the common interest agreement confirms a perceived shared legal interest, nothing more."

ORDER RE CLAIM CONSTRUCTION by Judge Wesley L. Hsu. For the foregoing reasons, the Court ORDERS the construction of the disputed claims as stated herein. (lom) (Entered: 04/08/2026)

Invalidity

↳ Indefiniteness

The court found claim 10 of plaintiff's patent for adaptive weighting of pictures in video encoding invalid as indefinite. "In its opening brief, [Plaintiff] relies on the language in Claim 8 to exemplify the relationship between the weighting factor, reference picture index and the reference picture. It goes on to propound a figure illustrating such a relationship. However, if this were so clear from the plain language of Claim 10 itself, [Plaintiff] need not have engaged in such an artistic endeavor. Rather, such a figure supports the inference that the relationship is not evident from the Patent's text and prosecution history. Defendants' expert . . . convincingly attests that the 'patentee chose to use a different language for claim 10, which would be understood by a POSITA to mean that the assignment and association of the second weighting factor recited in claim 10 is different from that of the weighting factor first recited in claim 8.' If the patentee sought to mirror the same language it used in Claim 8, it could have easily done so in the patent drafting process."

Description Of Invention (35 USC § 112)

↳ Indefiniteness

↳ Corresponding Structure In Means Plus Function Claims

The court found plaintiff's patent for modifying a user interface invalid as indefinite for lacking sufficient structure. "Rather than directing this Court to evidence from the Patent specification to shed light on the purpose of 'side information components' in Claim 1, [Plaintiff] relies on expert testimony to claim that these components are merely data and serve no functional purpose. But [Plaintiffs' expert] also testified in deposition that these components are 'a description of data that's being transmitted to enable a receiving system to carry out certain modifications or functions.' Such an admission convinces the Court that the claim term effectively recites 'function without reciting sufficient structure for performing that function.'"
