The Consumer Electronics Show \(CES\) 2025 event has just kicked off and Noise took the stage to showcase its cutting edge wearable products. Noise unveiled the new Luna Ring Gen 2.0 and the ColorFit Pro 6 series of smartwatches. So let's check them out.

Noise at CES 2025

Noise Luna Ring Gen 2.0

One of the flagship products unveiled at the CES 2025 is the Luna Ring Gen 2.0. To recall, it is the official successor to the Noise Luna Ring that was first announced back in July 2023. This is the world's first AI powered smart ring, which is built using fighter jet grade titanium. The Luna Ring integrates advanced AI features to help improve bio monitoring systems that can track users' stress, heart health, sleep, blood oxygen, and women's health.

The Luna Ring 2.0 offers AI powered workout and can even last for up to 30 days on a single full charge. Noise kicked off pre-bookings for the Luna Ring 2.0 earlier today (9th January 2025) while deliveries are expected to start in March 2025. The pricing and availability details are still at large.

Noise ColorFit Pro 6 Series

Alongside the cutting edge smart ring, the company announced the ColorFit Pro 6 series. The brand dubs these smartwatches as the 'Pro for Pros'. The wearable also integrates Artificial Intelligence, while the ColorFit Pro 6 models promise high performance packed in a sleep design.

Noise ColorFit Pro 6 Max

It was built to offer high precision tracking, new innovations, and seamless accessibility. Noise claims that the ColorFit Pro 6 series aims to take the smartwatch experience to the next level thanks to its cutting edge technology.
