The gesture Ring by Logbar has been reviewed as "the worst product ever made"

HOT!

After earning \$880,998, over $500,000 more than the Kickstarter goal, the Japanese manufacturer Logbar set out to deliver what would have been one of the most interesting wearables of the year. The emphasis is on "what would have been," in this case, as it seems to have fallen short of what people were expecting or what was indicated in the promotional video.

We're glad you're here! The YouTube tech review channel Snazzy Labs delivered a scathing review of the Ring after playing with it and finding out that not only is it extremely difficult to use and unresponsive, and not only is it large and uncomfortable, but that the manufacturer likely won't be shipping out various advertised features such as being able to control your TV with the Ring.

ADVERTISING

Some of the issues mentioned include that the wireless charger actually requires direct contact with charging pins, that the Ring has a very low gesture accuracy rate, that it requires restarts fairly often, and various other concerns like the Ring App needing to be opened for any of the functions to work (thus negating the fundamental benefits of the Ring).

It is likely that most of these issues, especially the detection and accuracy rate, can and will be corrected with software updates. Still, however, with an almost $900,000 Kickstarter campaign, 18 months of development and a $269 price tag, even v1.0 of the product should have been significantly better.

One more example of why you shouldn't invest in something on Kickstarter just because the promo videos look cool.

This article reminds me about the South Park Kick-starter episode.

Never heard of it, but... Kickstarter. People should have known better.

◀ Gaffney

Kickstarter is great, you just aren't going to find some amazing new technical breakthrough on it. People have unrealistic expectations for what is a crowd funding website for small creators.

Just keep away from 'technology' and stick to books, films, fashion, design and music.

You must have missed the post on neowin calling it the best thing since sliced bread and referring heavily to steve jobs.

The One Ring not even Gollum would want?

◀ Seahorsepip

Lol was too expected.

When I first saw it on ks I was already like... Nope.

Plot twist: Ring contains ebola

So, kind of like Kinect gestures. /snark

I love the Power Glove. It's so bad.

Some kickstarter projects make it, some don't. This one is one of those over hyped ones, not enough resources to make, no market research, no style and poor execution. If you are going to get into wearables on kickstarter, you gotta do the research, also look at fashion styles as well

◀ burritodave

I have a better ring. It tells my mood and costs less than $1.
Doesn't even have to be charged.

The wonders of science!

Just a frustrating project ... Now apple steal the idea, and make it hundred times better ...

◀ ZipZapRap

yeow, that is one unhappy customer!!
Fair play though, it looks like a v.0.1 product.

◀ Steven P.

Indeed, nicely put together though.

◀ theyarecomingforyou

Reminds me of the Leap Motion. I bought one based on the hype and after the novelty wore off it's just sat there, unused.

◀ duoi

I think the main issue with the leap motion was that it was wired and that it isn't able to account for depth. I'm sure it'll make a comeback once both of those limitations can be overcome.

Kickstarter and 99.9% of the other crowdsourcing projects = Modern day panhandling.

Then you find the diamond in the rough like solar roadways on indiegogo

Not only the worst product but worst idea as well. Why did anyone donate even $0.01 to this???
