Ohio's first Slick City Action Park is opening a location at Polaris this spring.

Slick City Action Park is expected to open at 1170 Polaris Parkway this May. The action park features waterless slides and air courts for various activities. This will be Ohio's first Slick City location.

Spanning 35,000 square feet, the space will feature 12 dry slides as well as air courts for dodgeball and basketball. There will also be a dedicated play area for toddlers and an event space.

Founded by Bron Launsby and Gary Schmit in 2021, Slick City is headquartered in St. Louis, Missouri. The first location opened in Denver in 2022, and there are now over 50 locations across 18 states that are open or are in the process of opening.

"At Slick City, we believe there's no age limit on fun," CEO Launsby said in a press release. "We're incredibly proud to open our first Ohio location in North Columbus and introduce families, teens and thrill-seekers of all ages to our one-of-a-kind waterless slides and engaging attractions. This is a new kind of entertainment park built to move, inspire and wow guests time and time again."

Slick City Action Park will open this May at 1170 Polaris Parkway.
